THE BASEBALL excitement ends, the Yankees' nine men from New York beat nine "Cardinals" from St. Louis four times in succession. And Babe Ruth made three home runs in the last game.

Nothing could be more desirable than to see a game like that, except to do something worth while yourself, if ever so little.

There are limits, it seems, to bootlegging. The mayor of New York orders police to prosecute those that have been selling poisoned whiskey, sometimes called "smoke," to miserable drunkards in slum speak-easies.

The number killed by poisonous whiskey in New York since last Saturday has risen to 26.

A thousand policemen are investigating speak-easies and have closed 40 of them, leaving, according to police calculations, about 24,360 still open.

When our government starts to make alcohol unfit for human consumption, it succeeds.

The Supreme Court decides that Canadians may cross the border to work on jobs here and go back in the evening, needing no passport.

The highest court having spoken, that settles that, and everybody will be glad to see our Canadian friends treated in a brotherly spirit.

But complications may arise. Earning high wages in the United States, spending it in Canada for anything you choose, including good cheap beer, may prove a temptation. Americans might move across the border to live, eat, drink and pay low rents there, while earning their money on this side.

Between Mohammed dead and Mussolini living, King Zogu, of Albania, chooses Mussolini.

A Mohammedan now, but will cunningly become a Christian and marry an Italian princess, living thereafter in his Albanian palace under the shadow of Mussolini's wing.

Intelligent Zogu. He has read Mark Twain's statement that a young June bug is better than an old bird of paradise.

Zogu knows that a living Mussolini is better than a dead one, however. You feel sorry for the Italian princess.

The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism demands a high-powered radio station in New York city and does not get it, although the easiest way to make an atheist ridiculous is to let him talk.

It is hard to understand how anybody could talk atheism, knowing that his voice, propelled by a power beyond comprehension, travels around the world through the mysterious ether.

Atheists, young ones, especially, might meditate on one of Bacon's collected apothegms:

Simonides, being asked by Hiero what he thought of God, asked a day evening time to consider it; and at the sevennights' end he asked a fortnight's time; at the fortnight's end, a month.

At which, Hiero marveling, Simonides answered that the longer he thought upon the matter the more difficult he found it.

The more giddy you answer King Hiero's question the less you know.

E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, discusses wages and wants to see them higher. Better standards of living, according to President Grace, demand greater earnings for labor. "Continued prosperity and high wages go hand in hand." That's common sense. The big man can only get his share of what the little man earns above the minimum cost of living.

In New York polling-places are open, with the exception of one day, only from 5 to 10:30 p. m.

With women voting, that should be changed. Between 5 and 10:30 p. m. mothers are busy getting supper, getting the children to bed, tucking them in, listening to their husbands' complaints.

2 ARRESTED IN CAFE HOLDUP

STAGE ROBBERY TO RECOUP MONEY LOST IN GAMBLING DENS

Two men, one a domestic in the Brookline home of Nat Kiley, tennis star and Olympic skater, were arrested today as the holdup men who held a waiter in the China Rose restaurant, 1088 Boylston st., Prudential, and robbed him of $200.

In Auxiliary Court, men in the police court, the prisoners was charged with assault with intent to rob. Judge Palmer held them in $10,000 each for a hearing October 18.

The men arrested were Abdool Yalalan, 22, who said he is a former Boston University student, and gave the Nile home in Middleton as his address, and Marino Sisson of Rutland st.

Both men are alleged by police to have confessed, and Detective Sergt. Thomas Hayes said the holdup was staged to get back money lost during the last four days in the "joints in gambling dens of Chinatown."

Yalalan was seized while attempting

Yankees Get $5531; Cards Draw $4197

St. Louis, Oct. 10—Official World Series checks totaling $5,531 each member of the New York Yankees entitled to a full share of the series spoils will drop down chute for his four-game loot, while each St. Louis Cardinal regular will get a loser's share of $4197.

Members of New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics, second place clubs, will receive more than $1000 each, the players on the third-place Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Browns will get about $800 while the Pittsburgh Pirates and Washington Senators, fourth places, are due to collect about $400.

PASSENGERS STAND BY READY TO BOARD ZEPP FOR AIR VOYAGE TO U. S.

When the transatlantic Graf Zeppelin starts on its epochal flight from Friedrichshafen to New York representatives of only the leading newspaper picture services were accepted and two airplanes will accompany the dirigible part of the way.

And to get the real inside story of the history-making flight from the moment the hope ship rises from its hangar in Germany to the landing of Eckenerd, N. J., you will have to read The Boston Evening American.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 10 (AP)—The start of the transatlantic flight of the huge dirigible Graf Zeppelin was set late today for 8 a. m. tomorrow (3 a. m. Boston time).

Announcement of this was made a few hours after Dr. Hugo Eckener, who is to pilot the big airship to the United States, had reluctantly decided that he could not get away today.

A stiff breeze blowing around the hangar today made handling the big craft impracticable. Even tomorrow's start was predicted upon a change in the condition.

The passengers and crew, however, still stood by feeling that perhaps there would be a sudden turn

SLAYS GIRL WHO 'BEGGED DEATH'; TAKES POISON

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 10 (INS)—His face seared by poison he had swallowed in a suicide attempt and tears streaming from his eyes, Glenn Jenkins, 21, student waiter, staggered into a police station here today crying hysterically, "I have killed her," and fell over unconscious.

While doctor worked over the unconscious youth, officers found the body of Marie Young, 21-year-old telephone girl, lying in a blood spattered automobile parked at the curb in front of the station.

Jenkins was revived later and told Prosecutor T. A. J. Martin he had killed the girl at her own request.

"She asked me to kill her the first time I met her and we often discussed methods," Jenkins said. "She said she did not want to die by shooting after we had attended a

CURLEY AND FITZ 'BURY HATCHET'

An indication of the burying of the hatchet between former Mayor James M. Curley and John F. Fitzgerald was seen in today's announcement that the latter will speak at the former's noon rally in old Faneuil Hall tomorrow. Curley will personally introduce "John F."

While the Curley supporters would not say flatly that the breach between the two leaders has been healed, it was pointed out that the two men have at least shown their willingness to subordinate their personal antagonisms while working in the cause of Governor Smith.

On the other hand, persons who follow Democratic politics in this city closely were confident that former Mayor Fitzgerald's agreement to speak at the Curley rally was an evidence that both men were willing to shake hands and let bygones be bygones.

EMBARGO ON N. E. GOODS IN N. Y. EXPRESS STRIKE

An embargo on all shipments from New England to New York and connected territory was declared today by the American Railway Express Co. as a result of a sudden strike of from 12,000 to 13,000 employes in New York.

Meanwhile it was declared in Boston by General Chairman A. F. Bolinger of the express division, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, that there is little likelihood of the strike spreading to New England.

Conditions here between the company and workers are harmonious, he said, and he does not believe a sympathetic strike will be ordered outside New York.

San Pedro, Cal., Oct. 10 (AP)—In the Arctic by flying over the north polar area, and who spanned the Atlantic by airplane in one of the most thrilling transatlantic flights, will meet adventure at the nether end of the earth by essaying to "fill in the blank space on the map" of that region.

HOOVER TOLD HE WILL CARRY NEW YORK STATE

Washington, Oct. 10—Herbert Hoover was told today by two New York Republican leaders that he would carry Gov. Al Smith's home state.

They were H. Edmund Machold, state chairman, and Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman, who conferred with Hoover about his invasion of New York on October 12.

"The situation is very good and the tide is steadily rising for Hoover," said Machold. "He will undoubtedly carry the state."

Aside from the drive for the 45 electoral votes of the home State of his Democratic opponent, Mr. Hoover is evincing a lively interest in the success of the State ticket, as well as the party candidates headlined.

There are evidences that the Republican party managers are well ing the organization there into a more cohesive group and that a more intensive campaign will be waged both up-state as well as in

ADVISORS URGE SMITH SPEECH IN TENNESSEE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 10—Governor Smith presided over a political clinic here today before setting out for Dixie land and the politically-skittish states that border it on the north.

There was a stream of Democratic leaders in and out of the Smith suite on the 14th floor of Hotel Biltmore.

Tomorrow Smith will be in Virginia and North Carolina, Friday he will be in Tennessee and Saturday in Kentucky. Some of his most important counsellors urged that he not spend an entire day in Tennessee, seeking with the religious and prohibition issues, without saying a few words to the crowds in Chattanooga and Nashville.

The Governor has intended to make plain his ideas on the tariff. This far he has been obdurate toward extending his speech-making activities.

But here in New York today, on the eve of his journey into the

ZEPPELIN COMMANDER'S OWN STORY OF ATLANTIC FLIGHT PLANS

German Sky Liner As Seen Over Ocean

THIS IS HOW ZEPPELIN WILL APPEAR FROM DECKS OF ORDINARY SURFACE SHIPS
The huge Graf Zeppelin, due to leave Germany for America at 2 a. m. (Boston time) tomorrow morning, will be well overseas in a few hours if weather conditions are at all favorable. This International Newsreel composite photo shows how the great sky liner appears to those on ordinary ocean surface ships, as she glides through the ether far above turbulent waters of the always more or less seething Atlantic.

STUDIES ROUTES TO U. S.

By COMMODORE DR. HUGO ECKENER

Commander of the Graf Zeppelin on its forthcoming transatlantic flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst

Copyright, 1928, by The Boston Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved, except on the European continent. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 9 — The Graf Zeppelin is all clear for its departure.

The officer in charge of loading the ship is distributing the small amount of baggage of the crew according to definite instructions, and the passengers are waiting at their hotels for announcement of our impending departure.

In the meantime, I sit before a number of the last daily weather charts, following on paper the course of recent areas of depression on the Atlantic, and let the entire situation in which we find ourselves pass in review before me.

We must start as soon as possible. That is absolutely necessary in the interest of the airship, not the Graf Zeppelin, but airships in general.

We are not in the position of pilots of airplanes who can quietly wait for days, under unfavorable circumstances, even weeks, until especially favorable weather on the Atlantic appears. They could do that for the sailors would know that they planned a daring sort of record-breaking achievement, and that the airplane as a regular means of transportation over the ocean has not yet come into consideration.

But the airship has claim already to being now as appropriate aircraft for transatlantic traffic. It may not wait for particularly favorable weather.

Isn't that so?

I observe and study the course of the isobars (lines of equal barometric pressure) on the charts lying before me, and silently shake my head. For four or five days, a strong storm area has lain between Ireland and Newfoundland.

The effects of this storm area extend clear down south of 30 degrees. It would bring us strong, stormy and contrary winds were we to lay our course south of the center of that depression.

We may, therefore, reckon with an average headwind of 35 to 40 miles an hour over a distance of not less than 1500 miles, which would reduce the speed of the airship from 70 miles an hour to only 30 or 35.

That would mean that we would require from 40 to 50 hours—or what is scarcely one-half of the distance, were we now to start and go over the southerly routes over the Azores. Aside from that we would certainly meet with dirty weather, and thunderstorms in the southwesterly sector of this area of depression.

THE CHOICE OF ROUTES

And how about the route northerly of the center of this barometric depression? This depression extends so far North that it would probably be necessary to go as far as Iceland to get around it. Is that agreeable, or advisable, at this time of the year?

I cannot become friendly with this thought. Presumably we would meet with snow and hail, not to say that we would have to travel most of the time in complete darkness.

I cannot deceive myself as to the inadvisability of taking the northern route in the winter months, except perhaps for the time of the full moon. In these months, therefore, generally speaking, it seems preferable to go by the southerly route.

But the weather situation which has prevailed in the last five days will force our going very far South, perhaps even to the thirty-fifth degree North latitude.

NOT AFTER SPEED MARK

On such a route, it would not be necessary to reckon with very strong headwinds, but the distance would be very much greater. It would make the distance from Friedrichshafen to New York perhaps 6000 miles, and that would mean a trip of 75 to 80 hours, since even on this very southerly course, contrary winds would have to be met and overcome.

Let us hope that in the next 24 hours, there will be a more favorable meteorological condition.

It will be seen from what I have said that speed records should not be expected from the impending first transatlantic flight of the Graf Zeppelin. For this reason of the year, it would be a piece of extraordinary luck if we covered the distance from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst in 63 to 70 hours, and it should not be forgotten that Friedrichshafen lies eight hours from the Atlantic coast.

It should be admitted frankly that the Graf Zeppelin has not the speed that an airship for the regular transatlantic should have. The limited size and form of the Graf Zeppelin. The decisive thing in this flight is not the speed, but the fact that it is a practical transportation flight across the Atlantic.

I, for my part, anticipate very important progress and a strong impulse for development as a result of the participation of the United States in this field, and welcome with the liveliest expectation the active public interest of America in the impending flight.

The voyage of the ZR-3, now the Los Angeles, was a good prelude to the forthcoming flight, but it did not have the importance that attaches to this one. There was for us Germans a small flaw in the motive of that flight in that the ZR-3 was delivered as an obligation growing out of war times.

The Graf Zeppelin, on the other hand is going free and joyously to a friendly nation in the realm of international traffic, which we hope will bring the nations closer together.

OUSTING OF HORAN IS HALTED

Association, by telephone, that he was unable to intercede in behalf of Harold J. T. Horan, Universal Service staff correspondent, whose success in obtaining a copy of the Anglo-French naval proposals resulted in an order for his expulsion from France.

"The case is outside my jurisdiction," the premier advised Bird. "I would suggest that you get in touch with the foreign office."

Bird, who is a staff member of the Consolidated Press, has not yet, however, received any reply from Foreign Minister Briand to whom he made a similar appeal in the name of the Anglo-American Press Association.

Paris Editors Split Over Horan Arrest

Paris, Oct. 10—Paris editors were divided in their opinion as to the propriety of the French government's frank note of action in arresting Harold J. T. Horan, Paris correspondent of Universal Service, for making public the foreign office letter to ambassadors on the details of the Franco-British naval agreement.

Horan was surrounded by bicycle police while driving in Rue de la Paix in his automobile and held for more than seven hours for questioning, undergoing the third degree in the office of the prefecture of police.

"It is certain that the misdemeanor taken against Horan are justified by the fact that in publishing a French diplomatic document which was confidential it was manifest that the American correspondent committed an offense which required punishment," says Le Temps.

DEFENDS CORRESPONDENT

Camille Aymard, in La Liberte, takes a different view—"Is this, from the viewpoint of law, a crime? No. Horan only performed his newspaper duty. Why does they get after the culpable person who communicated a document entrusted to his charge?

"For a long time it has been noised about in political quarters that the communicating was done by a functionary of the foreign ministry to embarrass the action of the responsible minister and the French Government. This incident may bring others having serious consequences for our country.

"For some years the American press has placed offices in Paris. Thus France was becoming the center for political information for America. Now the group of American newspapers may decide to transfer their bureaus to London if the measure taken against Horan is maintained.

ACTION UPHELD

"Horan has not committed any fault. As a newspaper correspondent he has only fulfilled the role of disseminating information. He cannot be blamed. Let them denounce the men who in reality to blame and then punish him."

A writer in L'Intransigeant says—

"The French Government is right in punishing Horan. Any other government in its place would have done the same. The French Government does not want a foreigner living in France, who tries to spoil the good relations between Paris and Washington, or Washington and London, to go unpunished."

London Press Arraigns French Government

London, Oct. 10—The comic Opera holding of Horan in the Paris Universal Service Paris correspondent, and the expulsion order issued by the French government today, aroused the entire British press and public. It was the biggest news sensation of the week.

Some of the editorial comment strongly sympathizes with the victimized correspondent and Universal Service is praised for doing a service to the peace in publishing the text of the Anglo-French agreement.

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard declares:

"The absurdity which from the beginning has surrounded the affair of the naval pact, has been brought to a fine culmination by the excitability of the French. Few recent episodes in any capital of Europe can have been much more ridiculous than the arrest of Mr. Horan, Paris correspondent of Universal Service.

"As though he had been a dangerous armed criminal who must be taken unawares if he is to be taken at all, police on bicycles lay in wait for him and seized him in the Rue de la Paix.

"The first thing that strikes one about the affair is its almost imbecile ineffectiveness. Mr. Horan seems to know nothing about the French foreign office letter concerning the pact save that it was handed to him by Mr. Hearst for translation to America.

"It might be logical, though it would be foolish, to arrest a single all foreign newspaper correspondents from France. But even that would leave the indigenous product untouched. Last week the Echo de Paris was permitted unchallenged and unmolested to publish full summaries of all diplomatic correspondence which accompanied the pact.

"What does the French Government propose to do about that? We do not credit the French Government with any particular sinister intention in this latest performance. It has, on the whole, shown rather more commonsense than our own and has at least favored official publication. But even about this there has been mystery and absurdity."

ing to escape from the restaurant after the bold holdup.

Sisson was captured by police after a chase through The Fens. His shirt and hands were dyed with blood.

Both men were identified as his assailants of Loong Shing Yee, the assaulted waiter. Identification was made at the bedside of the Chinese in City Hospital, where he is suffering from possible fracture of the skull.

At first denying complicity, the arrested pair, while being measured and finger printed at police headquarters, are said to have admitted their part in the holdups.

LOST IN GAMBLING DENS.

Yalahan told Police Inspector Frank Mullen and Patrolmen Maurice Sheehy and Lawrence McNamara that, for four years, every cent Sisson has earned beyond the money for bare necessities, has been taken from him in the Chinatown "gambling dens."

The prisoner said he and Sisson went to Chinatown again last night and that when Sisson quit the gaming table he had parted with $60 more all he had.

Yee, the China Rose waiter, was a winner in the game, Yalahan said, and they put on the holdup in an endeavor to get back some of Sisson's losses.

Yalahan admitted wielding the blackjack with which Yee was felled; Sisson admitted having a revolver and said he had carried it since he was in the navy, police said.

12,000 EXPRESS MEN STRIKE

Placing of the embargo on shipments to New York was announced by General Manager C. H. Emery of the American Railway Express Co. in Boston and New England.

The men who went on strike are members of the Brotherhood of Railroad and Express Clerks.

The news of the strike came unexpectedly, as there had been no intimation of labor troubles with the company.

Union officials said the strike call came after a vice-president of the American Railway Express Co. had refused to adhere to agreements entered into as a result of a strike in 1911.

The company was also charged with refusing to recognize the brotherhood.

Company officials early took action to fill places of men who have quit work.

in the weather and that the ship could go off today.

The latest weather report indicated that a depression in the Atlantic was spreading northward as far as Iceland and in a southerly direction as far as the Azores. Thus the depression blanketed completely the area through which the dirigible would have to pass.

The definite decision not to take off found the ship all ready for the start. The mails for America had been closed with a cargo of 16,000 letters, cards and parcels aboard. The baggage of the passengers, limited to 88 pounds each, also had been put aboard.

PASSENGER CHANGES

The complete passenger list continued of paramount interest and several changes and additions were announced. Dr. Kruger of the ministry of transportation will take the place of Prof. Ludwig Kaas, of the German Centrist party and three additional names were listed, these being Herr Von Tiyzska, a representative of the Zeppelin's underwriters Herr Bock, representing the Telefunken radio Company, and Herr Schiritz representing the Seiss Company, manufacturers of optical and navigation instruments.

Harmon Seeks Leeds' Berth for Zepp Voyage

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 10 (INS)—Clifford B. Harmon, president of the International Aviators' League, telegraphed from Paris to know if he could reserve the passage cancelled by William B. Leeds, young American millionaire, for the voyage over seas to Lakehurst, N. J., on the Graf Zeppelin.

The airship will carry 60,000 letters and postcards weighing 1320 pounds. The food and drink aboard the vessel add another 2100 pounds.

England to Bare All Documents In Naval Accord

London, Oct. 10 (INS)—The British Cabinet, at a meeting today, decided to publish all documents relating to the Anglo-French naval accord, it was authoritatively learned. The documents will be made public immediately.

The decision was taken on a request by the French Government that all matters relating to the secret accord be published in order to allay the suspicion which has grown up around the agreement.

COP LEAPS ROOF IN CHINESE DOPE RAID

Leaping across an intervening areaway to the roof of a building at 61 Harvard st., South End, early today, Sergt. James E. O'Neil forced his way through a skylight and admitted a raiding squad of Station 4 officers to an alleged opium den on the third floor.

Heavily barred doors blocked attempts of the police to enter the place and Sergt. O'Neil climbed to the roof of the adjoining building to reconnoitre.

He got off to a running start and cleared the space with inches to spare as other members of the squad stood in the alleyway 20 feet below ready to break his fall if he failed to make the leap.

After battering down three doors the squad, including Patrolman McGarrell, Gardner, Quinn and Moore entered the room of Yee Bing where four decks of opium and a pipe were found secreted in a mattress.

Sing was charged with possession of narcotics and two companions Wing See and Chin Yuen were arrested on charges of being present where drugs were found.

U. S. PROTESTS TO FRANCE IN HORAN CASE

Washington, Oct. 9—Strong demand for the protection of the legal rights of Harold J. T. Horan, Universal Service correspondent at Paris, now under an expulsion order to leave France Thursday, was made by the American government today.

Instructions were sent by the State Department to Norman Armour, charge d'affaires of the American embassy at Paris, to see that Horan's rights as an American citizen received the fullest consideration.

The State Department today was still without specific details as to the charges against the newspaper correspondent. No official report of the case had been received. It was understood that the expulsion order was issued to Horan for making public the details of the Franco-British naval agreement.

That Charge D'Affaires Armour was taking every step possible in the case was shown in Paris dispatches stating he had made two visits to the French Foreign Office within the past 48 hours.

At the White House it was said that President Coolidge was without official advices in the matter, but the position of the Government under his administration has been to insist upon protecting the rights of American citizens wherever they may be.

In State Department circles it was understood that Secretary Kellogg has taken a personal hand in the matter and was awaiting a complete report of the case from Paris.

CHARGE COP STOLE SEIZED RUM, SOLD IT IN STREET

North Adams, Oct. 10 (AP)—Charges made by Police Chief Michael Conlon against Patrolman Albert Whitney of selling liquor seized in a raid, today resulted in announcement by Mayor Johnson of his intention to remove Whitney from the force.

Conlon charged Whitney with keeping and selling liquor for which he solicited customers in the street and with quitting his beat and participating in liquor parties.

SCIENCE O. K.'S HER AS NEARLY LIKE EVE

By FRANCES I. BAIRD

The modern short-skirted, bobbed-haired flapper is nearer the physician's ideal of healthy womanhood than any female in history of the medical profession. And what's more the result of woman's emancipation from "soiled long skirts and long hair will be handsomer, straight-limbed children approaching the bodily perfection of ancient Greek gods in the next generation."

Dr. George E. Waugh, child specialist from London, attending the conference of the American College of Surgeons in Boston, so declared today. He predicted women will outstrip men in every line of progress in two more generations "unless men wake up and follow their lead."

"Short skirts, bare legs and bare arms promote natural beauty founded upon health. Fashion has done for the race what doctors tried to do for generations without success," Dr. Waugh said.

"Lighter weight clothing and the silk materials produced by the chemist have done more to bring woman back to the original beauty of Eve than any other thing. Soiled long skirts and insanitary long hair no longer hide deformities and parents today take an active interest in the growing child so that it has every aid for straight limbs, good teeth and bodily perfection."

Dr. Waugh said the sensible new mode of clothing will result in a

FIND MORPHINE IN MOUTH OF PRISONER

How he hid morphine under his tongue and was forced to emit it when booked at the Central Sq. station, Cambridge, was explained to Judge Stone in East Cambridge Court when Richard Ford, 42, of Church st., Dorchester, was arraigned on the charge of violating the drug law.

Patrolman Jeremiah Mahoney, complainant, told the court he saw Ford acting suspiciously in Massachusetts ave., near Central Sq., and, on questioning him found he had something in his mouth.

"I was in the act of booking Ford as a suspicious person when he twitched his mouth," said Mahoney. "I forced him to open his mouth as wide as he could, and on examining his teeth saw a small substance secreted under his tongue near the teeth. I forced it out and examination showed it to be morphine."

Judge Stone sentenced him to six months in the House of Correction.

JAIL TERMS FOR 23 RADICALS IN NEW BEDFORD

New Bedford, Oct. 10—Only two dissenters lifted their voices here today above the busy hum of local mills as thousands of workers, after a six-months' strike, hurried through factory gates on the third day of their reopening.

Marion Botelho, 24, and Caesar G. Barboza, the two alleged to have caused a disturbance outside the Page Mill on the south side of the city, were promptly arrested on charges of disturbing the peace.

A group of 23 radicals, arrested yesterday on charges of being idle and disorderly, waived examination before Judge Milliken today and were sentenced to six months each in the New Bedford jail.

Chief of Police Samuel D. McLeod today expressed the belief that radical interference with the millhands who elected to return to work is now at an end, and pointed to the comparative quietude which reigned this morning as the basis of his prediction.

Mrs. Clara Zink, of Everett, shown with her daughter, Shirley, three, was severely hurt when a trolley car and truck crashed on Elm st., Everett. Six passengers, cut by flying glass, were forced to crawl from the wreckage when it burst into flames.

WOMAN IN RACE FOR MAYOR OF REVERE

A woman today entered the race for mayor of Revere. She is Mrs. Ruth E. Beaton of Revere Beach blvd., Point of Pines.

Her platform, which will be enlarged upon later, according to her announcement, is primarily a woman's platform. Higher pay for teachers, local girls as teachers and appointment of a policewoman are among its planks.

Mrs. Beaton, who is one of six contesting for the Republican nomination, which ordinarily carries with it victory at the final election, is the first of her sex to enter the mayoral race in the beach city.

As there are said to be 150 more registered women voters than men in Revere, she is conceded a chance to finish near the top, if not at the top of the heap.

Mrs. Beaton has been married 14 years, but she is only 32. Her announcement came on the occasion of the seventh birthday of her daughter, Betty. Her other child is a boy, Douglas, 13. Her husband is John Beaton.

Mrs. Beaton is president of the Point of Pines Home and School Association.

WHITMAN WOMAN FOUND INJURED IN A SWAMP

Kingston, Oct. 10—With her leg broken in two places, Mrs. Hazel MacGovern, 35, of South ave., Whitman, was found today in a brook threading the Jones River swamp. Taken to Jordan Hospital, the woman told police and physicians a rambling story of experiences with two men and of having been put out of an automobile before dawn somewhere near the Pembroke-Kingston line.

How she suffered her double-broken leg or how she got into the swamp and then into the brook, she could not explain.

ALLEN CARRIES CAMPAIGN TO BERKSHIRES

Promising to adhere to policies introduced in the Bay State by Calvin Coolidge as Governor and continued by Governors Cox and Fuller, Frank G. Allen, Republican candidate, today made his appeal to Berkshire voters in a speech at Stockbridge.

"Twenty years of participation in town and state government convinces me that the people of Massachusetts know their government and appreciate its problems," he said.

"The sane and sober policies which Calvin Coolidge brought to every office he ever held are the policies which our party seeks to perpetuate in this Commonwealth.

"His policies in a general way included a simplification of our departmental organization; the inauguration of a segregated budget; immediate reduction of the state debt, initiation of a humane institutional program in our Department of Mental Diseases and our Health Department.

"The percentage of increase in the expense of government in Massachusetts in ten years has been less than anywhere else in America. Our debt has been reduced 65 per cent since 1919.

"This fine statement of condition is the most eloquent vindication of the statesmanship of Coolidge. Cox and Fuller did well to follow in his footsteps. If the opportunity is mine I assure you that their policies, approved by experience, will guide me."

John Hays Hammond of Gloucester, mining engineer, in a statement calls to task Gov. Smith for "irresponsible talk" in discussing foreign relations.

"The Democratic nominee and other speakers have stated we are the most hated nation," said Hammond. "The reasons urged for this by the Democrats are not convincing."

Every member of labor unions in Massachusetts is called upon to vote for Gov. Smith in a manifesto signed by Martin T. Joyce, secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor.

The Non-partisan Political Committee of the federation in this state has studied the candidates and platforms and decided, according to Joyce, that Smith has proved over a period of 25 years of public service that he has "an able mind, a deep human sympathy and a stern sense of justice for all."

Surgeons Find Way To Prevent Adhesions

Adhesions, annoying sequel to many operations, may now be prevented by a method reported to the surgeons at their clinical congress today by Dr Herbert Johnson of Boston and Dr. Shields Warren of the Palmer Memorial Hospital.

A fluid called azulactic fluid was discovered to have completely routed this dread after effect of abdominal incisions, following long experimentation on animals in the laboratory. It has been used with success on humans, the surgeons said.

Dr. Daniel F. Jones of the Massachusetts General Hospital is supervising the clinical trial of the new fluid.

WOMAN LOSES EYE IN FIGHT OVER BOTTLE

An insignificant half-pint bottle—empty—was held up today in municipal court as the object over which two mothers quarreled, resulting in the loss of an eye for one and a suspended jail sentence for the other.

The jail sentence, one of six months, was imposed on Mrs. Sarah Haddad, mother of three children, of Shawmut ave., South End, and she was placed on probation.

In the City Hospital lies Mrs. Mary Carroll, mother of five children, living at the same address. When her sixth child arrives shortly, one of the mother's eyes must be removed as a result of the battle.

The argument began, according to Patrolman Frank P. Sharkey, the prosecuting officer, when a half-pint bottle was found in the hallway dividing the apartments of the two women.

Back and forth the bottle was kicked during the battle—and finally Mrs. Haddad is alleged to have thrown a handful of plaster into Mrs. Carroll's eyes.

Mrs. Carroll was rushed to City Hospital in agony. That was three weeks ago and she is still there.

In court Mrs. Haddad denied throwing plaster. She said she was repairing the walls of her room and if any plaster got in Mrs. Carroll's eyes it was by accident.

But Judge Devlin imposed the sentence.

MEDIUM WILL HOLD SERVICES FOR ACTRESS

Spiritualist services for Bessie C. Poole, former actress and owner of a vaudeville act, whose death in New York is still cloaked in mystery, will be conducted at Onset, tomorrow, Louis Poole, her father, announced today.

Poole is former leader of a Boston orchestra.

Mrs. Herbert Corey, Boston medium, will have charge of the obsequies at the request of the girl's father, who stated he was carrying out the orders of the actress's mother, now divorced from him.

The funeral ceremony will be conducted in the Onset Knights of Pythias Hall after the body of the actress has been moved from the home of Mrs. Ellen Hedding of Eighth st., Onset, a grand-aunt.

The girl's New York friends, who talked freely of her death following a row in a Broadway night club, reversed their attitude today, either remaining silent or declaring they had no knowledge of how she came to her end.

Medical Examiner Charles Norris stated that because the body was embalmed before it was taken to the morgue, he was unable to state specifically the cause of death other than it was due to a complication of heart ailments.

Lillian Lorraine, Bessie's closest friend since both played in the Follies in 1918, and with whom she was living at the Dorset hotel, West 54th st., gave a new version of the incident.

"Bessie, two gentlemen whom I won't name, and myself went out to dinner at Dinty Moore's Saturday night," she said. "As I am recuperating from a dangerous illness I must be home early, so I had the gentlemen take me home. Besides, I don't go in for night life.

"The three of them then went to Chez Florence. A dispute arose. I don't know what happened, and I am positive there were no eyewitnesses. The next thing I heard of Bessie's death."

SCIENCE O. K.'S MODERN GIRL

higher type of mother because girls are healthier.

"Women are stronger than men—as was discovered during the war," he continued. "They have actually never been the weaker sex as men liked to believe, for doctors have long known that the ratio of infant mortality is twice as high in boy babies as in girls under five.

"Women discovered their great physical and mental strength during the war and emerged finer in every way. They can never again go back to the narrow limits imposed upon their sex and they know it.

"The men who criticize their dress today have not the courage themselves to discard the stiff uncomfortable derby hat, let alone alter his attire to express mental freedom."

He said he did not know know how to change men's garb at this time but ventured the opinion that golf knickers worn in the streets do not add to the charm of his sex.

As a parting shot at the flapper's critics Dr. Waugh dismissed "drug-store" complexions as merely a spasmodic reaction to Marie Antoinette beauty aids of 100 years ago.

"And what possible harm does rouge and powder do either the wearer or the beholder?" he asked. "Just suppose the girls did not care how they looked."

"Cigarette smoking is only another evidence of the new world vision of the modern woman" he added. "I do not think they harm a girl any more than they harm a boy if smoked in moderation."

FINED FOR CATCHING BASS WITH HIS HANDS

Attleboro, Oct. 10 (AP)—Because he caught a five-pound black bass without aid of a hook and line, Philip Jenkins of North Dighton was fined $5 in the district court today. L. E. Myatt, game warden, told the court Jenkins flipped the fish out of the Norton reservoir with his hands when the water was low.

The law provides that bass may be taken only by angling during the open season.

Giant Cossack Sobs Over Dying Empress Marie

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 10 (AP)—The former Empress Marie of Russia, who has been ill at her home near Copenhagen, has kept to her bed the last few days. The dowager empress, whose long life has witnessed much personal tragedy, has recently been feeling weaker.

She summoned the commander of her famous Cossack Guard into her presence yesterday and took leave of him, thanking him for his life-long devotion. The giant Cossack, who had guarded her for many years, sleeping just outside her door, broke down after the fare-well scene."

PRINCESS MARY PLEADS FOR FIREBUG SUSPECT

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Oct. 9 (AP)—Lord Lascelles, husband of Princess Mary, has written to the Government of the Irish Free State asking that no punishment be inflicted upon men arrested at Lahinch in connection with the Increagh fire at Fortumna castle, the County Galway seat of Lascelles. He said both he and Princess Mary would deeply regret being even indirectly the cause of suffering to anyone in Ireland.

ROBINSON IN TALK TONIGHT

Los Angeles, Oct. 10 (AP)—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, carried his campaign close to the home city of Herbert Hoover today for a second round of speeches in the state. He was scheduled to speak at San Francisco tonight. With promises of action on Colorado river development and jibes at what he declared were years of procrastination under Republican rule, the nominee opened his California tour here with three speeches.

Gains by G. O. P. in 2 States Shown in Straw Vote

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Noted Political Analyst

CHICAGO, Oct. 10—The Drake revolution mounts to new heights today in the Hearst nationwide poll with Herbert Hoover going into the lead in Virginia and drawing away from Governor Smith in North Carolina.

In the Tar Heel State, Hoover is now polling 56 per cent of the total vote.

These 12 electoral votes, every surface straw now indicates, will be Hoover's unless the mutchinery built up in the last 60 years and intended to make impossible just such a flop, operates to nullify the uprising at the polls.

The Virginia showing of the G. O. P. candidate today, as disclosed in the Hearst poll, is supported by nearly all the newspaper experts who have been getting "local atmosphere" in the old dominion.

MARGIN SLIGHT

The Virginia vote stands:
Hoover 2533
Smith 1506

Hoover's lead is nothing to crow over, to be sure, but the significance lies in the fact that he could even offer a serious threat to the Swanson-Glass majorities in the old dominion.

The North Carolina vote today is:
Hoover 7781
Smith 6097
Hoover lead 1684

Not only because of the situation in the border States of Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri and Oklahoma, all of which Hoover has a chance to carry, and better than an even chance in all but Missouri, as shown in the Hearst poll, but because of the threatened collapse of the Democratic forces all through Dixie, Governor Smith is being hurried to the border in an effort to stop the threatened catastrophe.

One of the ablest and most reliable observers in North Carolina, whose sympathies run to the Smith ticket, writes us that if the election were to be held today there could be no question as to Hoover's signal victory.

START BIG FIGHT

If Gov. Smith finally carries North Carolina, he says, the State will have to be won back between now and November 6.

In the effort to achieve just this result the State is to be subjected to a spellbinding barrage in the next three weeks that will embrace the biggest mobilization of orators, literature and radio communications ever known anywhere in the South.

With United States Senator Simmons, the patriarch of the Tar Heel commonwealth, leading the North Carolina revolutionary forces, Congressional districts, which have for half a century voted almost unanimously for the Democratic nominees, have flopped over in the last two weeks.

CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA VOTERS BREAK RECORDS

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP)—All records have been shattered by Chicago's registration of voters for 1928 elections. Complete returns show 1,389,743 men and women registered, against 1,044,895 four years ago. Registration of women is far greater than for previous elections.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10 (AP)—Women comprise nearly 42 per cent. of the enrollment of 729,467 for the presidential election, or 10 per cent more than the record for the mayoralty election last year. Registration this year is 305,853 higher than last year and 283,113 higher than for 1924.

South, he found the pressure upon him for speeches enormously increased.

It is likely Governor Smith will have visited eight States in his ten-day trip before he returns to Albany. They are Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Ohio.

He leaves New York at 11 o'clock tonight aboard the same eleven-car special that carried him through the West.

His first scheduled stop will be at Richmond, Va., the capital of the old Confederacy, at 9:15 a. m. tomorrow.

Three members of the Governor's family, Mrs. Smith and their daughters, Mrs. Emily Warner and Mrs. Catherine Quillinan, will accompany him. Others in the party will include Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson.

GLASS AND MOSES ON RADIO TONIGHT

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Political speakers on the radio tonight include:

Democratic: Senator Carter Glass of Virginia at 10:30 p. m. from Washington over WEAF and network of 38 stations.

Arthur J. W. Hilly, assistant corporation counsel, at 8 p. m., over WEAF.

Republican: Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire at 8:30 p. m. from Plainfield, N. J., over WOR and 28 stations of the Columbia chain. Mortimer B. Lesher at 7:30 p. m. from Pittsburgh over KDKA. "Hoover Minute Men," beginning at 5 p. m., will broadcast five-minute talks on "The Principles of Herbert Hoover" from 200 stations throughout the country. This program will be continued nightly.

the metropolitan area, during the four weeks before election day.

Hoover has been told that his own visit to New York City a week from Monday will be of benefit in this drive, stimulating the whole party organization.

Arriving in New York at 8 o'clock on the morning of October 22, the Republican standard bearer will establish headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where he will devote much of the day to conferences with New York leaders.

The nominee is putting in all his spare time on his Boston speech next Monday night. In that he will discuss both foreign trade and the tariff, if time remains he will also talk about the development of an adequate merchant marine.

CHILE AND PERU DECIDE TO NEGOTIATE BOUNDARY ROW

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—The State Department today announced that Chile and Peru, who recently resumed diplomatic relations, have agreed to the suspension for four months of the Tacna-Arica Boundary mediation to permit the two countries to carry on diplomatic negotiations looking to the settlement of the long-standing dispute.

BETTY ALDEN APPLAUDS WEDDING WITH SINGLE ATTENDANT ON BRIDE

Does Not Think Too Many Should Share Spotlight With Principal Character in Ceremony

BEING WEDDING ATTENDANT for a sister-bride is thrill enough for any schoolgirl. Miss Charlotte Lyman, younger daughter of the Ronald Lymans, will have that honor and be that star-eyed and important young person when Miss Elizabeth Van C. Lyman weds with Gordon Harrower in Emmanuel Church. And there'll be no dozen or more maids to precede the bride and dispose themselves like flowers about the altar. Entirely bereft of femininity is the wedding processional, save for the bride herself in radiant isolation, with her one attendant. And after all, isn't it the wise bride who goes thus almost unattended? For if ever there's a time when the spotlight's very center and all its luminosity belongs entirely to one person, it is the bride at her wedding hour, as organ notes surge up in dimly-lit cathedral and the marriage rites go on.

Miss Victoria Potter is one of the buds for whom many pleasant festivities are listed. She is a daughter of the Austin Potters, and rides to hounds with the Norfolk set.

THE GREAT GILT SCROLL of fashionable events—wherever it is kept—will be double, even triple starred for November 6 and the Lyman-Harrower nuptials. Socially prominent people from out of town and most of Boston's upper strata comprise a guest list that fairly reeks importance, the Lymans being kin to or friendly to every topnotch family hereabouts. And the bride-elect's circle is the creme of the younger fashionables. Not every bride is so fortunate as Miss Lyman in having a stately Beacon st. home for the reception, a home o' the perfect period beauty Bostonians proudly acknowledge as "Bulfinch." The Lyman house, up on the crest of Beacon st., commanding an unparalleled Common vista, is a gem. Within and without its excellencies of curving stairways, beautiful woodwork, purple window panes and satin-hung drawing-rooms are delights never ending.

WHILE WEDDING PLANS engross Miss Lyman, her pater, Ronald Lyman, devotes much attention to another social duty. That of obtaining a patroness list for the senior supper dances. Not that this is at all a hardship. Smart young matrons in the swankiest set deem it high honor to have their names inscribed on the subscription cards that go out for the supper dances. And invariably accept with alacrity and great satisfaction when Mr. Lyman asks them. For many moons the dates for the dances have been taken. In a crowded winter calendar it behooves foresighted ones to do their engaging early, even so early as the summer immediately preceding, and Mr. Lyman and his supper dance associates never could be accused of neglecting their duties for this ultra smart series of dances.

EDWARD MORRIS MURRAY plies back and forth across the ocean in true Morris Murray manner. Son and daughters, pater and mater, all think nothing of crossing the ocean several times a year. They embark on the long trip with a jaunty insouciance quite diverting, and to the stay-at-homes, quite enviable. Mr. Murray is at present on the high seas. He sailed for England last Saturday, and returns to the land of his temporary adoption after a summer with his parents at their lovely place in Pomfret. Now and then the Murray town house in Marlborough st. takes on a semblance of life, as some member of the family tarries there briefly between jaunts over the face of the globe.

THE JUNIOR DIVISION SET is all absorbed in its plans for the anniversary dinner, October 17, at the Statler. The ushers will be a busy coterie, seating the important guests who come to do honor to so fine and so long lived an organization. Debutantes of this season, just essaying fledgling wings in social flights, will serve, along with debutantes of past seasons who have "served" so much and so often that ushering and allied duties are mere child's play. Miss Mary Otis, Miss Marian Upton, Miss Susan Wiggleworth, Miss Julia Paine, Miss Anna Dickson, Miss Lucille Defren, Miss Katharine Hecht, Miss Mildred Ellis, Miss Winifred Thorndike, Miss Claribel Smith, Mrs. George Baker and Mrs. Gordon Dewart form the galaxy directed by Miss Betty Beal and Miss Peggy Bent.

MRS. GEORGE SALTONSTALL WEST arrived at the Junior Division S. P. C. C., all ready for board discussions looking very fetching in her dark rose sports frock. Paris smiles indulgently on this glorified version of daytime wear, so feminine local ones wear

LEGION HEARS GUESTS AFTER GAY PARADE

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 10 (AP)—Putting behind them three days of intense merry-making, climaxed by the most unmilitary parade San Antonio ever saw, tired legionnaires today turned to the serious business of the tenth annual American Legion convention.

Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, Maj. Georges Scapini, blind French war veteran, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, were scheduled to deliver addresses at the resumption of convention sessions.

The contest for the national commandership was believed to have narrowed down to Gen. Roy Hoffman, of Oklahoma City; Gen. Albert L. Cox, of North Carolina, and Capt. John D. Ewing, of Shreveport, La., although several "favorite sons" continued to be mentioned.

Convention business did a "parade rest" yesterday while the gay delegates and visitors passed in amusing review, before their war-time commander, Gen. John J. Pershing, their present commander Edward E. Spafford; Field Marshal Allenby of Great Britain; Gov. Dan Moody and other notables.

Four hours was required for the parade to pass. More than 10,000 veterans finished the march, though a considerably larger number started.

'GUILTY SINNER' HICKMAN ASKS FOR PRAYERS

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Oct. 10 (AP)—In a signed statement addressed to the Associated Press, William Edward Hickman, sentenced to death for slaying little Marian Parker, today confessed he was a "guilty sinner" and thanked the state supreme court for giving him time to prepare for death.

He denied to Warden Holohan that he tried to commit suicide as rumored.

"I have made up my mind to take my medicine," he said, "and I am not going that way."

Hickman is sentenced to hang Oct. 19. Refusal of the United States supreme court to consider an appeal has virtually barred the way to further legal maneuvers. Governor Young announced he will not intervene. Hickman's statement follows:

"I know very well I have been a most guilty sinner. Nevertheless, I have confessed my sins and I am now trying to do what is right.

"I am very sorry for having offended God and man. I deserve punishment and ask no personal favors. I am thankful that the Supreme Court has given me time to prepare for death.

"Please ask the people in the name of God to pray for us condemned men here at San Quentin prison. All glory to our Father in Heaven and on earth good will toward men.

"William Edward Hickman, No. 45,041."

TRUMBULL 'IN' STOCK-JOBBING DEAL, IS CLAIM

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 10 (AP)—Testimony that Gov. H. Trumbull and Secretary of State Francis A. Pallotti were allowed to purchase stock of the National Associated Investors, Inc., below the market price and sold at a profit was introduced by J. Verner Anderson, former lobbyist, at the trial of Roger W. Watkins, broker.

Anderson, former office manager for R. W. Watkins & Co., fiscal agent of the N. A. I., Inc., testified that Watkins, charged with embezzlement of $141,000, gave him one hundred shares of stock for sale to Trumbull and a similar amount for sale to Pallotti.

The governor sold his stock at $36, $37 Anderson said. Pallotti also 100 shares at $15 a share. Anderson was permitted to buy at $15 a share, declared, giving his check, although and he, too, later sold at $26 or $27, the market price at the time was $25, Anderson testified.

The Old Alibi

SCORNFUL, Elaine swept out of the room. Dick lowered his paper and stared after her, thinking.

It was an old alibi, this being too tired to play. Other men weren't. They found real relaxation in their evenings . . . made friendships that helped them all through life.

Yet work for Dick meant hard work. Elaine never realized that. He had to drive himself, and he came home evenings cross, irritable—completely done up.

HE'D tried so many things to get himself into shape. Ordinary laxatives, from "health foods" that acted uncertainly after weeks, to cathartics that wracked his system. And he distrusted them all . . .

Feen-a-mint is different!

In the first place, it's just like a bit of delicious chewing gum. You don't swallow it hastily—you chew it!

This is important—because you chew it, its tasteless yet almost magically effective laxative principle is released slowly, the way science meant it to be released. It actually becomes a part of the digestive fluids—does not disturb digestion.

Thus instead of striking a blow without warning, as it were, Feen-a-mint gently helps the system to help itself. It works with the body, not against it!

Feen-a-mint is science's answer to the well-nigh universal problem of constipation. It won't torture you with griping pains. It won't poison or weaken the system. It won't enslave you to laxative pills. Get Feen-a-mint at your druggist's. Correct constipation now!

MYSTERY GIRL AGAIN ESCAPES

Four more Bostonians will be guests of the mysterious lady from the Silent House next Monday night, at the Majestic Theater, where the Chinese mystery play, "The Silent House," is now showing.

But none of the four will be the $100 richer they might have been had they recognized the pretty but mysterious lady when she spoke to them yesterday.

Two days now she has roamed the Hub, asking questions between 2 and 4 p. m. and none of those in conversation with her have been sufficiently alert to seize the opportunity.

More chances today to get that $100, however. All you have to do if you think the mysterious lady is querying you is say:

"You are the mysterious lady from 'The Silent House.'"

You must have a copy of the Boston Evening American in your hand when you say it, also.

However, those questioned and not keen enough to recognize her will be delivered tickets for the Majestic Theater next Monday night, as her guests.

CUBA JOINS U. S. VETS IN HONORING '98 HEROES

Joined with the veterans in paying respect to their American comrades at the Maine Memorial.

For the first time in 30 years the war forces of the United States and Cuba veterans of 1898, were joined in marching order and their flags were carried side by side. Providence, Oct. 10 (AP)—Clarence Augustus Barbour, president of Rochester Theological Seminary, today was elected president of Brown University, to succeed Dr. William H. P. Faunce next June.

Dr. Faunce submitted his resignation, having reached the retirement age of 70 years.

TEACHERS FORM RIDING CLUB FOR "REDUCING"

A horseback riding class of 13 has been organized by teachers at the McKinley School, Revere, for "reducing" purposes. The teachers hope to increase the size of their class by enlisting instructors in other schools. They have arranged for Tuesday afternoon riding at the Fulton st. stables, Medford.

OFFICIALS AT FUNERAL OF SENATOR CASHMAN

Officials of city and state filled the Assumption Church, East Boston, today when solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated for State Senator John B. Cashman, who died in City Hospital after a long illness. The pastor, Rev. William Barry, was celebrant; Rev. James A. Hurley, deacon, and Rev. James G. Glennon, sub-deacon.

From Youth to Age

There are three trying periods in a woman's life: when the girl matures to womanhood, when a woman gives birth to her first child, when a woman reaches middle age. At these times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps to restore normal health and vigor.

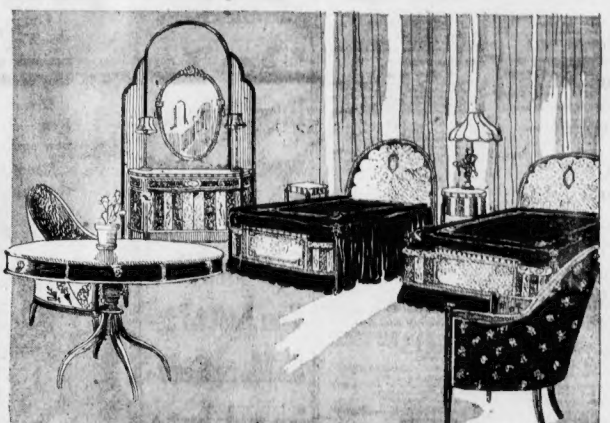
OPENING OF A NEW SERIES OF ROOMS AT PAINE'S

"fine furniture in a home atmosphere"



Moderne Setting—Sixth Floor

THE MODEL DISPLAY ROOMS inaugurated last Spring in the section of dining furniture have been so favorably received, we have extended the idea to include bedroom furniture.

The entire Sixth Floor has been divided into 29 rooms and an aisle of alcoves with suitable accessories to create a charming background enabling one to visualize any suite in a home atmosphere.

Further evidence of Paine leadership and intent to make this a store that deserves your patronage.

A cordial invitation is extended to visit these rooms, see the many new and interesting suites and discuss individual needs for the home without obligation.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Have you seen—have you tried
This all-together all-Atwater Kent set?

DO you want your radio all together—receiver and speaker in one set—a complete instrument in the most compact form—only 30 inches high?

Here it is—the Atwater Kent 1929 all-electric Model 52. Wonderfully small. Satin finished on all four sides and a speaker grille at the back as well as the front—for convenient placing. Delicately beautiful. Right in the modern trend—simple, adaptable, good looking.

Compactness, simplicity, the true one-dial, the metal shielding cabinet with the satin finish—all these improvements originated with Atwater Kent Radio. Now they're all combined in this all-in-one set of cabinet type.

It is designed and built, every part of it, by Atwater Kent—26 years' experience is concentrated in this new and different kind of radio.

Tone that you'll recognize as the real thing the instant you hear it. Power and range and selectivity. Clean and quick selection of programs with the FULL-VISION Dial. Reliability insured by 294 factory tests or inspections.

The nearest Atwater Kent dealer is demonstrating Model 52 now. He invites you to listen.

On the air—every Sunday night—Atwater Kent Hour—listen in!

GETS SIX MONTHS FOR STEALING FROM AUTOS

John Nerick, 30, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction today for larceny from autos in Boston. Police say he would lure motorists into parking places that had closed for the night, induce them to park there all night and later depart himself with whatever he could gather.

GANNA WALSKA MAY PAY DUTY ON $2,500,000

Washington, Oct. 10 (INS)—Ganna Walska, opera singer, must pay duty on $2,500,000 worth of clothing and jewels seized by the New York collector of customs when she arrived recently from France. This ruling was made today by E. W. Camp, customs commissioner, who upheld the action of the New York collector.

Mme. Walska, wife of Harold McCormick of the Chicago Harvester family, appealed to Camp on the grounds she was a non-resident of the United States because she has been living in France.

BOSTON REGISTRATION 272,953; WOMEN LEAD

With the women still leading the men, Boston's registration total today advanced to 272,953 by the addition of 1311 names to the voting list yesterday. In the several outside ward offices and at City Hall Annex, 1117 women qualified, compared with 694 men.

Jury of 7 Men and 5 Women Immune to Beauty Appeal

Media, Pa., Oct. 10 (AP)—A jury of seven men and five women here was immune to pulchritude, Judge McDade charged in the case of Mrs. Vivian Meidwell Page, the Miss Mobile of an Atlantic City pageant: "Because God has endowed this girl with beauty, be exceptionally careful not to let this fact sway your verdict." She was convicted of larceny.

ELEO ON LAST PRACTICE FOR BIG 'HIKE'

A preliminary hike on the North Shore, which consumed her time from shortly after breakfast till luncheon, was undertaken today by Miss Eleonore Sears, Boston society woman, in preparation for the Laurel-Baltimore walking marathon on Saturday.

Clad in her conventional hiking costume and with her easy-going stride, she left her Pride's Crossing estate with no announcement of her destination. The only information concerning her schedule was her order to the household staff to have luncheon ready for her at 2 o'clock.

Her appearance at Pride's Crossing followed a "solo" hike from Boston in which she covered the 14 miles in five hours, arriving in "good condition."

She is merely getting in trim for the long grind Saturday, when she will attempt to best some of the country's greatest hikers over a regulation marathon course of 26 miles, 385 yards.

Considerable mystery shrouded the purpose and destination of Miss Sears' hike from Boston. It was first thought that she was bound for Magnolia, but later it became known that she was going to visit friends in Pride's Crossing.

She covered the first ten miles without being noticed. She had crossed the marshes at Revere at the rate of about five miles an hour, but this was cut down when she reached congested Lynn streets, where she was first observed.

'REDS' FIGHT TO GET TO KING

London, Oct. 10 (INS)—While King George and Queen Mary were paying a state visit to Newcastle-on-Tyne today about 1000 Communists and unemployed attempted to break through police lines and approach the assembly rooms where municipal dignitaries were entertaining the royal couple at luncheon, says a Central News dispatch.

Police charged the rioters and a struggle followed. Finally the demonstrators were dispersed. Several were arrested.

RICHARD CODMAN DIES AT WEST ROXBURY HOME

Richard Codman, member of one of Boston's oldest families, died after a short illness at Faulkner Hospital. He was 88 years old. From 1870 until his death, Mr. Codman has lived on the 50-acre estate on Cottage st., West Roxbury, on which the new West Roxbury Latin school is located.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. John S. Codman and Miss Margaret Codman of West Roxbury, and Mrs. William G. Boriand of Boston, and two sons, Richard and Alfred of West Roxbury.

GLORIA SWANSON HAS A NEW STEPFATHER

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP)—Gloria Swanson has a new stepfather—C. C. Woodriff, a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Company Orchestra. Woodriff and Mrs. Adeline Lou Burns, mother of the screen star, were married recently at Tijuana.

It was Mrs. Burns' third marriage. Her first husband, Joseph T. Swanson, father of Gloria, was a sea captain. Her second was Matthew P. Burns, a wealthy California shoe merchant who died, leaving her his estate.

BORAH GIVES BORDER STATES TO HOOVER

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—Senator Borah called upon President Coolidge today and predicted that Herbert Hoover would carry Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Minnesota in the November elections.

The senator said that his analysis of feeling in these states was based on the observations which he derived from his recent speech-making tour.

LAW EXPERTS PLAN CHANGES AT PARLEY

A meeting of the newly organized Law Society of the Commonwealth, which is expected to effect important changes in numerous laws, took place today at the Hotel Bellevue, with many prominent attorneys present.

Judge David A. Lourie of the superior court and Judge Michael J. Murray, father of the present poor debtor law, were scheduled to be on hand, and the meeting was to be broadcasted through station LOK.

An effort was to be made to change the automobile insurance law which allows service to be made of notice by mail. Such a change would aid in the elimination of fraud, the society believes.

Efforts were also to be made to stop the encroachment upon the law practice by laymen and corporations, and by persons unfitted for legal work.

The meeting was to consider also methods of preventing frauds by unscrupulous auto dealers, and teeth were to be put into the poor debtor law.

The officers of the Law Society are Edward M. Dangel, president; Albert G. Tierney, vice-president, Frank H. Noyes, treasurer, and Hyman Krinsky, secretary.

World-Wide Hunt Started for Pope's '98 Auto

Providence, Oct. 10 (AP)—A search international in scope and already costing a small fortune has been instituted by Henry Ford, General Motors and all of every other automobile manufacturing interest for a specific type of auto manufactured before 1908, discovery of which is expected to save millions for defendants in a patent infringement suit brought by the Packard Motor Car Company.

Garages and barns of the wealthier set at Newport have been subjected to an intense search by Ford agents. They are looking for an electric vehicle made by the Pope Manufacturing Company in 1898, at that time called a "Don a Don." It had seats for four passengers, two of whom sat with their backs to the others.

It is believed to have been equipped with demountable and interchangeable wheels. It is with reference to these that the patent suit is concerned.

FATHER CATCHES SON IN STOLEN CAR, ARRESTS HIM

Brockton, Oct. 10—With the arrest of a 13-year-old boy by Bridgewater police, Brockton authorities today asserted that they had ended their search for the leader of a youthful band of thieves who had stolen nine automobiles. The boy was handed over to the Bridgewater police by his father, who captured him in a stolen automobile after a long chase.

WHAT A DOCTOR KNOWS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

There IS a way of overcoming the tendency to constipation. And here is how you can PROVE it.

The next time your bowels need any assistance, don't take the first laxative that comes to mind. Take one the druggist can assure you is made with CASCARA. Just as effective as using force, and it's good for the system. Indeed, it helps make good blood. For cascara is nothing but the bark of a tree. The Indians chew this bark, and live to an old age without a day's sickness.

What happens when you cascarize the bowels? They will usually function well for SEVERAL DAYS and more often—no larger, and perhaps smaller than the first—and the bowels function of their own accord for a still longer time. Until you don't feel the need of any aid of any sort for weeks on end.

So, the only habit you get from cascara is that of natural and normal regularity. How different from things one must usually repeat on the re-rew! Cascara is the ideal laxative; and the familiar Bitter candy cascaret is doubtless its ideal form. Children beg for these tasty tablets, and many men and women think of taking ANYTHING else for the purpose. And EVERY druggist has them.

TURQUOISE RETURNS after many years to adorn Milady, and is welcome indeed, for there never was anything so utterly feminine as this precious stone. Come jewelry in all sorts of modernistic and antique designs set with this and all the popular imitation precious stones—carnelian, rose quartz, jade and lapis are to be found at the remarkably low price of $1.00. A finishing touch to the well-planned ensemble!

TENDER SKINS that are easily irritated by even the finest soaps will find a certain meal that can be mixed with water to form a paste will have a most cleansing and soothing effect. It banishes blackheads and closes enlarged pores, and is sold for 50c. A small amount added to your bath will have a marvelous effect in softening the water and refreshing your skin.

MEN FOLKS do like to have their shopping done for them, and just between ourselves, we enjoy it, especially at a store where courteous welcome and helpful suggestions will assist you in making the proper selections. You will find a special offering of a famous make wool and cotton union suits, regular $3.00 value for $2.35, is just what you have been looking for and for which you expected to pay much more.

THE FLOWERS THAT BLOOM on richly furred coats add just the proper touch of color to the Fall ensemble. Velvet gardenias, two on a spray, in pastel and tawny shades to blend with Autumn browns, can be purchased for 50c. Here are all kinds of flowers and all at one price—even a spray of diminutive gardenias in variegated shades that would be adorable on a dark colored frock.

RUSHED TO THE HOSPITAL is not always bad news, not when the Hospital is just a place where that favorite shirt of your husband's can be reconditioned to look like new. Frayed cuffs and holes at the neck can be repaired, and there you have a brand new shirt! All for a very small cost.

A REAL TRANSPARENT VELVET gown for only $19.75 sounds almost unbelievable, doesn't it? But that's what you'll find at a shop I know of, along with some others in plain and printed transparent velvet priced up to $25.00. For the larger figures there are velvet trimmed georgettes and crepes in youthful models that come just a little wider and longer than the ordinary large sizes, for $16.75. Sizes up to 46.

A SPECIAL FALL PRICE for Frederic's Vita-Tonic permanents is now being extended at a shop where personal service is given. Since Fashion decrees that Miss Modern's hair shall be waved at all times, a permanent that gives a wide, loose wave with ringlet ends is indispensable. Here is one for $10!

THE SUBTLE SUGGESTION of well chosen perfume is quite essential to complete Milady's toilet, and Godet of Paris, aware of the magnetism of enchanting odors, has prepared three delightful perfumes that come in one-ounce sue bottles, Nuit d'Amour, Jasmine and Chypre, and a special price of $1.50 for a short time only, has been placed on these perfumes.

PLEASE ENCLOSE a 2c stamp with your name and address and I will send you information on the above items.

9TH RECORD BREAKING MONTH! IN WILLYS-OVERLAND HISTORY-

GREATEST SEPTEMBER

141% AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

MONTH after month, Willys-Overland's sales records have been smashed throughout the year! And the big parade goes on—last month was the greatest September in the Company's 20-year history!

It was the ninth consecutive record-breaking month. Sales of Whippet and Willys-Knight motor cars were 141% ahead of sales for September, 1927.

This towering structure of success has its foundations deep down in the sound elements of dollar-for-dollar value—in proved operating economy and dependable performance of the Whippet Four, Whippet Six and Willys-Knight Six.

The Whippet Four offers to light car buyers many engineering advantages formerly found only in costly cars. The Whippet Six is the world's lowest-priced Six, with 7-bearing crankshaft and other important superiorities. The Willys-Knight Six—at the lowest price in history—is bringing the marked advantages of the patented double sleeve-valve engine to thousands of new owners.

"AMERICANA" IS BIG HIT AT COLONIAL

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

HAVING already tasted and enjoyed Mr. J. P. McEvoy's first "Americana" we were prepared to take his newer exploits at the Colonial last night on their face value. No matter how you measure it, weigh it or wash behind the ears, revue is revue—and revue is hodge podge. Mr. McEvoy, master technician in the art of turning rippling syllables into snickers, giggles and guffaws, was both foster-father and stern schoolmaster to this newest of "Americanas." Of course it was different; you expected that. While revue, as a general project of the theatre, is pretty much cut and dried both as to music and literature, there was reason to believe Mr. McEvoy would edge away from all ancient formulas. He did.

Eileen Hamilton

For the first time, at least, you were served with revue which depend upon its own logic and native satire rather than upon the broad comedy of Broadway and its adjacent alleys. If you were seeking rip snorting, hilarious skits you must have been disappointed, for, with few exceptions, they were missing.

TALENT ABOUNDS

Music was the watchword of this Americana—and jaundiced melodies of high order filled your ear. Roger Wolfe Kahn is credited with that part of the performance. As composer he occupied equal prominence with Mr. McEvoy on the printed program. Truth compels the admission that Mr. Kahn turned in a sweeter job in music that his collaborator on book and lyrics.

Few people you had ever before met traversed "Americana" scenes; there were no familiar faces. Yet talent abounded. And it appeared in two shades—tan and pink. Negro spirituals filled the theater with full, round tones. One number, "Chain Gang," led by J. Rosamond Johnson, lifted the evening out of commonplace entertainment and gave it quality not often discovered in revue.

In other spirited moments Eileen Hamilton toiled diligently; she was the lovely lady of modern revue, here, there and everywhere. She danced well, after the fashion of such events, but chiefly she was tender tonic for faulty vision. Mary Stanbury, in her own way, had few idle moments and many busy ones. Her one great struggle with the arts was to demonstrate, with stereoptican accompaniment, the curse of alcohol and the sin of intemperance. A noble effort, not fully appreciated.

DONAHUE SCORES

For the shifty feet Joe Donahue, of the Charlestown Donahues, gave ample proof that Jack is not the only member of the family who possesses nervous feet. Joe did his stuff in good form and made it register.

Any McEvoy "Americana" is different, and this was no exception. Call it revue or satire; label it in any manner befitting the theater, it still runs high as American humor boiled down for the busy man. This particular "Americana," however, is less comic than its predecessor, but more tuneful. Mr. Kahn's music sets a new high standard for musical revue.

BROOKLINE IS HOST TO STARS

"Brookline Night" will be observed at Loew's Orpheum Theater this evening when a great many admirers and friends of Frank and Danny O'Neil, local vaudeville favorites, will be present to greet them.

The O'Neil boys have been highly successful in the vaudeville world and their splendid harmony singing has earned them another contract over the Loew circuit which will take them throughout this country and Canada.

Danny O'Neil Frank O'Neil

They are holding "open house" this week at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. O'Neil at 68 Boylston st., Brookline.

Tomorrow evening a large delegation from the Brookline lodge of Elks and Brookline Press Club will attend the Orpheum in a body.

Benefit Performance

The Morgan Memorial will be the beneficiary of proceeds to be derived from two performances of Tony Sarg's Marionettes at the Tremont Temple today. The performances will take place at 4 p. m. and 8:15 p. m.

TIGER LOVE by EUSTACE HALE BALL

the Night The Amazing Story of a Dancer of

CHAPTER 2

FROM his tree-perch Punjari prayed, with eyes close shut. The sight was too fearful for his tingling nerves.

He heard a roar, a soul-shattering roar.

And, in the middle of that roar, it seemed there boomed the elephant gun of his Sahib!

He opened his eyes, peering through his tears of terror. At first his sight was suffused and then in the moonlight he saw a strange scene. His master was running forward and snatching the limp figure of a vulgar, low-caste dancing girl in his arms, barely in time to save her from the claws of a sprawling, wounded tiger, in the last bitter throes of its death agony.

Punjari was sliding down the tree now, and outraged dignity lent wings to his feet as he sped across the meadow. No longer was he overwhelmed with reverence for this maiden of the wild grace and fairness of limb . . . had she been a divinity no tiger would have came. Had she been an incarnation of the gods his master would never have used guns to her rescue. And all the snobbishness of his own high caste rebelled against the sacrilege of the brute white Sahib even touching the hand of a woman who would have danced before a group of villagers such as these, without the traditional robes of an Indian woman.

He must rescue the Sahib from defilement before too late.

He was breathless when he finally touched the white man on the arm. The other turned about, a triumphant grin upon his face.

"Just in time, Punjari," were his words. "Help me carry this girl into the village. She's pretty badly shocked . . . lucky that devil's claws didn't touch her. Hold her a minute. I'm going to load up again and put another bullet into him—he's not quite dead yet. If a tiger has as many lives as an American tom-cat he'll need a broadside. And I don't want to spoil the skin either."

"But, oh, master!" exclaimed the little Hindu in horror . . . "she is no dead! She is love-ste."

"Nonsense," snapped the other, forcing the girl into the guide's unwilling arms. "She's the pet of many of the court ladies I've seen around this neck of the woods, and that's

VANISH FROM HOMES

GIRLS DISAPPEAR AFTER RIDE

Three Lynn and Swampscott children are missing from home. In large photo is Ruth Perry, 17, of Swampscott, who vanished with girl chum after auto ride. Her chum, Beatrice Regan of Lynn, is shown at upper right. Below is Ruby Taylor, who has vanished with her mother.

GIRL, 6, SPURNS FATHER

WOMAN IN COMA FOR 11 DAYS

Eleven days in a coma at Cambridge City Hospital, while doctors and nurses exercise all their art and ingenuity to ward off death, Mrs. Elisabeth Dann of Holyoke of Cambridge, presents an apparently unsolved puzzle to the medical world.

She was injured in an automobile accident on North st., near Bridge st., Cambridge, on September 28, taken immediately to the hospital where it was found she had a fractured skull and multiple injuries.

The patient is being given liquid nourishment through a tube inserted in her throat. A surgeon is in constant attendance and a nurse is always at the bedside.

According to police, Edward J. Donovan of Grove st., Arlington, was the driver of the machine that struck her. Donovan is reported to have said that Mrs. Dann stepped from the sidewalk directly in front of his car too late for him to stop.

Devlin Spurns Leadership

Belfast, Oct. 10 (INS)—Joseph Devlin is reported to ignore leadership of the opposition in the Ulster Parliament on the ground it might lead to rival Protestant and Catholic parties.

Wife and 5 Children Have to Take Back Seat for Horse

Martin Frazier of Old Colony ave., Wollaston, thinks so much of his horse, he told Judge Avery today in the Quincy Court, that he spends more for the upkeep of the animal and himself than he does for the support of his wife and five children.

Frazier's wife, who hailed her husband into court on non-support charges, testified her spouse allows her only $10 a week for herself and family although he makes between $35 and $40 weekly.

Frazier declared he made only $28 weekly and admitted he kept more for himself and the horse than he gave to the support of his family.

Judge Avery took the case under advisement.

RAID NEAR COPS' STATION

Five hundred gallons of alcohol and 248 pints of whiskey were seized today by Brighton police in a raid conducted on two buildings on Washington st., Brighton, within view of the police station.

The raid was conducted by Capt. Dunlap, Sergt. Muldoon and a detail of officers armed with a search warrant.

In a warehouse they seized the alcohol in 10 drums, and the liquor was found in an automobile storage building.

REJECTS TEARFUL PLEA TO JOIN HIM IN COURT

The spectacle of a father on his knees, tears in his eyes, pleading with his six-year-old daughter to go with him, while she, entrenched behind her mother, screamed refusal, was staged in the corridor of East Cambridge courthouse today.

The principals in the drama were Harry J. Schulman of Chester, Pa., his wife, Mrs. Martha Nelson Schulman, and little Virginia May Schulman.

For 20 minutes the father begged, pleaded and cajoled, and Mrs. Schulman stood by whimpering and grimacing, while the shrieks of the little girl rang through the courthouse.

Finally the court of Judge [illegible] was called to order, and Attorney [illegible] said he would [illegible] Mrs. Schulman was [illegible] Virginia was forced to recall counsel for the warring couple before him and arrange for a conference this afternoon.

The little girl was in court on a writ of habeas corpus issued last week by Judge Harris on petition of Schulman, the mother having petitioned for custody. Schulman claimed Massachusetts had no jurisdiction and asked the court to order Mrs. Schulman to take the child back to Chester, Pa. He and his wife had married [illegible] and later divorced.

According to Schulman his wife [illegible] temporary custody of Virginia and violated a court order by bringing her out of the State to Massachusetts.

The hearing scheduled for today was on the writ and also on the mother's petition but when the case was called Miss Harris was informed that Attorney George M. Pratt, counsel for Mrs. Schulman was engaged in another court.

It was agreed to postpone the hearing [illegible] and Attorney Pratt [illegible] Mrs. Schulman [illegible] Judge Harris will be brought up.

The little girl brought into court by a deputy sheriff, was released by court order, and counsel for Schulman then asked permission for the father to see Virginia as he was leaving for Pennsylvania tonight, and had not seen the child for some months. Judge Harris granted the [illegible]

The [illegible] returned to the [illegible] and pleaded, but the child was adamant and he was forced to give up his efforts. Then the Judge intervened.

WORLD GROWS BETTER, SAYS COOLIDGE

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—Addressing the general convention of the Episcopal Church here today, President Coolidge proclaimed religion to be necessary for the continuation of American government and the maintenance of those liberties and privileges which are characteristic of American life.

"We cannot remind ourselves too often," the chief executive said, "that our right to be free, the support of our principles of justice, our obligations to each other in our domestic affairs and our duty to humanity abroad, the confidence in each other necessary to support our social and economic relations, and finally the fabric of our government itself all rest on religion.

GUARANTEES OF LIBERTY

"If the bonds of our religious convictions become loosened, the guaranties which have been erected for the protection of life and liberty and all the vast body of rights that lie between are gone."

The present convention and other similar organizations were taken by Mr. Coolidge as evidence that "the major forces of the world are actively and energetically engaged in promoting the spiritual advancement" of humanity.

"When," he continued, "we remember further that this movement is steadily advancing through the years, . . . we realize that it provides a complete and devastating answer to the indifferent, the cynic and the pessimist. We cannot doubt that the world is growing better."

MUCH TO BE DONE

This conviction should not blind the country to "the enormous work that yet remains to be performed before the goal of human perfection is reached," the President added. "There are almost whole continents . . . still to be given the advantages of modern civilization.

"The light which we shed for others will depend upon the intensity of the flame which we create for ourselves," he said, adding that therefore, "the greatest service which we can perform for the world is to perfect our own moral progress." If we can do that, we need have no fear concerning the helpful influence we shall supply to others.

"In spite of our great school system, our secondary institutions, our colleges and our universities, many of our young people are still growing up with the most meager advantages of education. There are large settlements of people in our great centers of population still living under foreign conditions. Although they are dwellers within our borders, they have never yet really come into the United States."

MEANS TO NOBLER LIFE

"While the American people make great efforts to excel in industry and commerce to strengthen the national finances and generally perfect the material structure of our national life," Mr. Coolidge warned that these objects are not an end in themselves."

Gehrig Says Cards Better Than They Were in Series

LOU ALSO PRAISES "UMPS"

By LOU GEHRIG

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10—It's all over.

And once more we're champions of the world in four straight games. Which perhaps is the answer to the world that even cripples can win ball games if they have the punch.

Yesterday's game, the best of the lot to win, was the most nip-and-tuck played. The Cardinals had a big chance to win. We gave it to them. But they couldn't get to Hoyt when hits meant runs.

You know, in a lot of ways Watt pitched better ball yesterday than in that first game. He was hitmore and he didn't have as much stuff. But he had the courage to bear down when he was in a hole—and that's the greatest test of pitching ability you'll find.

I felt sorry for Bill Sherdel yesterday, the little fellow had a hard task, and he gave everything he had. He pitched great ball, too, and if the Cardinals had been able to show any punch back of him, he might have won. But they didn't and Bill's title still goes. He's the champion hard luck pitcher of World Series' history.

I'm not going to say much about Yankee hitting. It spoke for itself out there yesterday. I'm not going to say anything about the plays in that final game. They're over and done with. I do want to say this for the Cardinals. They're a tougher, harder club than they showed in the series.

I want to say a word about the umpires, too. You know umpires don't get much credit, but they're boys who make or break a World Series. The umpiring throughout was of high order.

The Yankees played great ball in the series for the most part, as I predicted before the series opened. Our pitching was good. Better, I think than the Cardinals expected and our hitting, while it may not show so well in the averages, was timely and hard. It has been a long time since any club has come through with nine home runs in a world series.

That's what the count shows for us. The Babe's work was wonderful. If there was any hero of the series it was him—and remember he was playing all the way through with a broken hand and a pain in him with every step. What a hitter he is.

I'm glad it's over. I'm happy we won—and I'm glad if my own playing had a little something to do with the victory. There were mistakes, but they weren't intentional. There were angry words occasionally, but no one really means them. By and large it was a good series, sturdily played. And the Cardinals were good sports throughout. It was a pleasure to meet them.

RABBIT SAFE AT HOME

Walter Maranville, peppy shortstop of the Cards, gave his club a temporary breathing spell when he scampered home safely in the fourth inning. A wild toss to second gave the little fellow his chance.

RECORD-BREAKING STRIDE

Babe Ruth is shown here making his second score via the home run route. With one more four-base blow the Babe equalled his own world record. He should stay out of the minors for another year or two.

Punts, Passes and Fumbles

By BILL GRIMES

Coach Joe McKenney will send his Boston College charges through a strenuous workout this afternoon, which will be the final drive before the Duke game. Although the B. C. boys are fast rounding into shape again after the tough battle in Annapolis, there are still many bruises in evidence and therefore Coach McKenney has been lenient this week.

Kenneth Henn, who is making a week end visit to Harvard.

Eddie Sutton is rapidly fighting his way to the second team at Dartmouth. Sutton reported with the end candidates at Hanover, but he was shifted to the backfield because of his speed and weight, when Al Snyder broke his leg. Sutton will be selected to act as Capt. Dick Black's sub during the Big games.

Charlie Murphy, the Hull boy, was the man of the hour for Boston College at Annapolis when he intercepted that pass late in the final quarter. Murphy is a fine all around athlete and just what he has not been developed into a top-notch pitcher is hard to understand.

Coach Austin Tate of Lehigh attended a fine and prospect is not far away from him when John McCoo matriculated at Holy Cross. Mc Cool played for Tate when the former Latin school star was coaching at Liberty high school in Bethlehem, Pa. McCool weighs 190, is fast and has a keen knowledge of the game. Under Bunny Corcoran, McCool should develop into one of the best ends the Crusaders have had in years.

After the exhibition of fumbling against Springfield, the Harvard backs will be ridden hard this week by Coach Horween. The Crimson ball carriers were hitting the line with one arm extended and, upon being hit, allowed the ball to get away from them. Two arms are none too secure protection on line plunges, while one is not much better than trying to balance the ball on one hand and crash through.

There is a fine game scheduled for Brunswick, Me., on Saturday, when Williams and Bowdoin clash. The Polar Bears lost to Amherst last Saturday but the Purple have come throught with flying colors in both of their games. Mal Morrill and "Ginger" Fraser are adding a fine piece of work with the mediocre material at Bowdoin and will give Coach Caldwell's Williams outfit a real battle.

Although the season is only just underway, Fordham is playing its objective game this Saturday, when Coach Cavanaugh will toss his Maroons in against Coach Chick Meehan's New York University. The Meehan coached aggregation gave "Cav's" tribe a terrible beating last fall, but Fordham has a much stronger team this season and the Polo Grounds will be the scene of one of the hardest fought conflicts of the year, when the Maroon and Violet go to it on Saturday.

HEAVYWEIGHTS FEATURE ST. JOE'S TOURNEY

Heavyweights will feature the weekly amateur show at St. Joseph's T. A. C. in Commercial Hall, Bowdoin sq., on Saturday night.

SAM MARK WANTS STAR FULLBACK REINSTATED

Fall River, Oct. 10—Sam Mark, owner of the Fall River Marksmen, has requested the reinstatement of Bob Macauley, fullback suspended for three months last summer as a result of the Maxwell incident.

Mark has asked that the leagues heads take a mail vote to put Macauley on probation for the rest of the suspension period. Macauley is now in Canada.

Yanks Deserve Big Crown of Baseball

By ROGERS HORNSBY

THE Yankees are champions of the baseball world again, and they deserve the crown.

They outplayed the Cardinals all through this short series, only needing a break in luck in the last game to come through with their second successive four-game series.

The last game turned on a call of time by Umpire Pfirman. The teams had battled along evenly for six innings, the Cards holding a one run margin. Hoyt and Sherdel were being hit a bit, but coming through finely in the pinches.

The Cards picked up a run in the second on Ormsby's double, Bottomley's base hunt, and Frisch's scratch fly. The great Babe tied it up in the fourth by poking a long homer over the right field roof. Two errors gave the Cards the lead in the fourth.

THEN the boys batted along to the seventh. Sherdel had two strikes on Ruth. Sherdel sneaked across a quick delivery, right through to the heart, but Umpire Pfirman had lifted his hands to call time. And that ended the series.

The Cards kicked, but the umpire can call time wherever he wishes. The Babe cracked the next one out of the park, and his slugging twin, Gehrig, followed suit. The Yanks were off and before the inning ended four runs were over, and Alexander was in pitching.

It was a tough break, but a team going on high gets them that way. And a team with Ruths and Gehrigs is always dangerous in the loose ones. Sherdel had been pitching good ball till that spot. A lot of the Yanks got on, but when Willie bore down, he stopped the scoring.

He had pitched carefully to the big hitters and except for the first one, Ruth smashed, had preferred to pass them rather than give anything good to hit. After the break in the seventh, he naturally was upset and lost a little of his control.

BABE RUTH naturally took all the glory in the last game. He socked three real home runs, just as he did against us here two years ago.

And he ended the game with a fine running one-hand catch of a foul, when the fans were throwing everything papers all around him. He's just a great ball player.

Hoyt showed another fine game. He's a free and easy pitcher, who gets a mad now and then but never loses his balance. Three and nothing never worries him. He works a batter to death, and then gets the ball over when he has to.

He was not as good as the opening day, but he was easing along more, holding the game in control all the way. The game was not as most interesting of the four, until the Yanks put on the big parade in the seventh.

RUTH'S HITTING WORTHY OF AN ALTROCK-NICK

NICK ALTROCK

St. Louis, Oct. 10—Well, friends and others, I got a big shock in this World serium. I discover that the Cards are funnier than I am. And they also get more money for it.

The serum ended just the way that I said it would. There ain't a pitching staff in the works that can end up against Ruth and Gehrig and live to write home to the folks about it.

That's a big laugh about the Yanks being crippled, and it certainly fooled everybody except the Cards.

Sherdel pitched a pretty good game, but he ran past the traffic lights and was overjoyed by Offie Ruth who knocked himself three home runs. Batting like that is worthy of an Altrock.

There ain't much to say about yesterday's game, but I will go to my grave wondering why Huggins pays seven other baseball players to get in Ruth's ant Gehrig's way when they is winning baseball games.

Some day Ruth will step on a Yankee infielder and Huggins will learn his lesson.

Give me the Babe and Lou and I will not only win the serium but I will also capture Berlin and chase them Chinese bandits back into their laundries. Them guys is no fun for baseball. They should be in the White House.

I said the Yanks would grab the navy. I didn't expect them to win four straight. But they did and baseball is over for the year until somebody starts an argument in the corner cigar store, which will probably be around eight o'clock tonight.

There is more baseball played in cigar stores than there is on the field. And them old stove leaguers will have plenty of stuff to chew over this winter.

This has been a great serum and I am glad it is over. The game is now finished.

Still, the Cards fans have got no squawk coming about that last game. They got in on matinees didn't they?

Ruth Greatest Ever—Flatley

BABE BIG HERO OF SERIES

Broke Many Records and, Aided by Gehrig, Carried Yanks to Victory

By NICK FLATLEY

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 10—There will be no second Babe Ruth. That just can't happen.

The big boy sticks out so far above the stars that were and will be that the future generations will have to be content with reading about him.

He crowned the Yankees as the world title over the Cardinals in four straight games, in one of the greatest acts of his colorful career. He smashed three home runs over the garden wall in right, took all the heart out of the Cards making a desperate fight to stick in there, and wound up the series with one of the most spectacular catches that these post-season events have known.

The big Bambino left a trail of shattered records and heartbroken Cardinals. A huge throng of St. Louis fans—and they're real fans—booed the Babe for breaking their hearts and cheered him wildly for the sheer brilliance of his performance.

It was Ruth who led every Yankee in the brief series. It was the Babe who made each Card pitcher look like a joke. It was the Babe, with material assistance from his playing twin, Lou, who hauled the Yanks to their second four straight triumph.

A ball club that can win eight series' games in a row, is a ball club. And as long as Ruth remains around, it will continue to be just that. He will have to step some time, but the year is hidden quite a distance down in the future.

THE series now a matter for the records and of records. The Babe himself scored nine runs, and thereby ups a new mark. He made 10 hits in 16 trips to the plate for an average of .625. That beats the .745 that good old Hank Gowdy established in that dear 1914, while he was hammering the Braves to glory.

His three homers in a game recalled the same devastating assault that he stacked out here two years ago. He couldn't win that series, because Hornsby had a fighting club. The cards this year were anything but that.

The 22 total bases that the Babe collected in this four-game romp equalled the mark set up by Joe Harris in 1925. It took Joe seven games to do it, which is the real lowdown on Ruth.

Whatever the best of the pack can do in seven games, the Babe performs in four. Gehrig and the rest of the Yanks had two columns of records pasted on their grips as they checked out last night. Lou knocked in nine runs, which nobody had done before. The Yanks fired five homers into the stands in the last game. And so on, ad infinitum.

NO story of this '28 series will be told without a few miles of the ultimate Ruth clutch. The beaten Cards had scored a run in the ninth, and were getting the range of Waite Hoyt. Not enough to annoy that young man and his hard-boiled Yankee indifference, though, to give their fans a last flicker of hope.

One run had scored and two were on the bases, with two dead. The boys in the stands were hoping with the optimism that an owner of a lottery ticket knows. Frankie Frisch was at bat. He hit a looping foul out toward left. It headed for the field boxes. Ruth forgot his aching grasp and came bearing in. As he ran along in front of the packed house, he had to carry on through a cloud of newspapers and scorecards.

The Card fans were reaching out trying to push or halt him. One frenzied gink hopped out and tried to make a tackle. He was brushed aside like a fly. The Babe kept going, stuck his glove out through the paper storm and nailed that baseball right off the rim of a box.

He whirled in his tracks, held the ball aloft in his mitten and waved it to the gang in the left field bleachers.

The boys out that way had started to throw pop bottles at the Bam early in the game. But he made a speech and thereafter they were cheering him. They gave a last yell as Babe turned and sprinted through the Card dugout to avoid the thousands who were bearing down to bite pieces from his uniform for souvenirs.

THE KING

Of kings in the baseball world, Babe Ruth, sultan of swat, who almost singlehanded carried the Yankees to victory over the Cardinals in the World Series. Every game was a personal triumph for the Bambino. He scored nine runs, a new record. He made ten hits in 16 times at bat for an average of .625, another series mark. There never has been another like him and never will be.

THIS story is all Ruth, because it must be. The dramatic moment of the game came in the seventh inning. Wee Willie Sherdel, tough lefty pitcher, had been holding back the surging Yanks wonderfully. The Cards had a one run lead.

Ruth came up in the second with one out. Wee Willie, the series unfortunate, smoked two low curving strikes across the Babe's knees. Babe shook his head at Umpire Pfirman. He thought the last one was inside.

Catcher Earl Smith, who made three zinging hits by the way, riled the ball back to Sherdel. Willie, waiting with his toe on the mound, wheeled it back like a streak of light, dead through the center of the plate. The iron girders of the stands shook with the mighty cheer. Babe, like the great Casey, had struck out. So the boys thought.

But Umpire Pfirman had lifted his arms and called balls. It had been agreed that the sneak return was null and void in this series. The Cards howled madly, to no avail. The umpire told them that Ruth, had he crowned that onion, would have been called back.

Sherdel grew gnarled. He cut the ball through after the debate had ended, and bloole—an arching fly went whizzing through the balmy air far over the roof of the right field bleachers.

The ball game went with that clout. Lazzeri in that direction. The hope that had been making the Cards look like a ball team for the first time in the series, vanished.

The Yanks had four runs before the inning was over, and big Alex was in there pitching.

OLD ALEX finished the 26 series in a blaze of glory, fanning Lazzeri as the gladiators with the bases loaded. This time he was just a workhorse, pulling a tough load.

The Babe crowned him for the third bonzer in the ninth. A swish of the big bat and quicker than it takes to tell, a loping liner went bouncing over the roof of the pavilion.

We asked Alex about that one, after it was over. "What can you do with a guy like that?" he wanted to know. "That was a perfectly pitched ball, a curve that just was nicking the inside corner. I sent that one down on a string. But that bird took his swing.

He hit that ball with the handle of his bat, not more than three inches from his flat. And it went out of the ball park. What can any pitcher do with a guy like that? That's what the baseball world wonders.

BEST TEAM WON MARANVILLE STATES

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10—The Yankees were by far the better team during the World Series and that is why they beat us so decisively. We have no excuses to offer. We were outhit and outpitched and when you have that combination against you there is no dodging defeat.

The whole complexion of the last game might have been changed if that disputed pitch of Sherdel's against Ruth had been called a strike. But it wasn't, so that's that.

It was a hard-fought series, made so than the fact that we were beaten four straight indicates.

I was glad to see Grantl get a chance in the big series. He supplied the punch for us during the last stages of the National League race. He made a poor start, however, by striking out in the first inning after the count was two and three.

CARDS STARTED TO GO

We got going, though when the Babe lost Hafey in the sun and Andy got two bases. Then Frisch fanned on a bad ball with the count three and two. But the pot thickened when Bottomley walked Hafey, however, was an easy out and we had lost a good chance to score.

Earl Smith, who like Grantl, was making his first appearance in the series, failed to come to a first class up. Grantl had promised Mr. Maranville he would hit first.

When I was at bat we tried the hit and run, but the ball was over my head and Koslo was an easy out at second. My two-bagger which followed was wasted. Here was another tough break.

Grantl got two bases on a Texas leaguer to center to start our rally of the third. Two runs was not for a big rally after Hick had been a bust. When Frisch sent a sacrifice fly to Bushel we scored and had good reason to be happy. We hadn't been ahead much in this series.

Then the Babe socked his first homer in the fourth and the score was tied again. A wild throw by Koenig put me on second in our half and I scored a minute later when Hoyt threw the ball into center field trying to catch me napping.

THINGS WENT TOLGAU

Things looked very bad when the Yanks filled the bases with two out in the fifth. Tom Meusel's grounder took a bad hop, and, I am sorry to say, hopped right into my glove and a toss to Frisch ended the inning.

That was the best play of the series, McKechnie told me between innings, but I guess Bill was trying to give me a good time.

Sherdel got out of another hole in the sixth when the Yanks put men on first and third and two were out Hoyt and Pasehal were easy. Bill was pitching beautifully up to this point.

I poked a single to center in our half sending Harper, who had walked, to third. Here Sherdel had a chance to be something more than a pitching hero. I stole second unmolested. A single would mean two runs. But he fanned.

We got the toughest break of the series in the seventh when, after we all thought Sherdel had struck out the Babe, the ump ruled otherwise. Then Babe hit a homer and Gehrig did likewise. Bottom I'll tell it.

This was the turning point of the game.

Old Alex, who replaced Sherdel, should have retired the side without further damage, but Haney lost a fly in the sun and it looked like an easy out went for two bases. Then the Yankees got some more runs and the game and the series was gone beyond repair.

I guess what happened the rest of the game doesn't count much. It looked to me as if the Yankees were playing home run for cuties.

From our point of view it was a very disappointing series. The result absolutely stuns me.

I guess the best way to sum up our defeats is too much Ruth and Gehrig.

Kozeluh-Richards at Arena Tonight

Karel Kozeluh, the noted Czecho-Slovakian tennis star, and Vin Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., will meet in a singles match at the Arena tonight.

The tennis stars are here. Richards was first to arrive. Mrs. Richards accompanied him.

Kozeluh motored here from Hartford, Ct., with Arthur Rodolph, pro at the Hartford club.

Rodolph is a Czecho-Slovakian also, and he and Kozeluh will team in the doubles against Richards and George Auerette, the pro at the West Side Tennis club of New York city, the largest tennis club in the United States.

Lady Waverley, the only woman ever elected to the select membership of the British Lawn Tennis association, and sponsor for this tour is also of the Richards party.

They declare that professional tennis is here to stay and to draw and be recognized.

In doubles match the teams were changed.

Kozeluh and Richards were listed to play Harvey Snodgrass and Howard Kinsey.

Boston Arena Picked for B. A. A. Games

The 40th annual games of the Boston A. A. will be held in the Boston Arena, Saturday evening, Feb. 2, 1929.

At a meeting held by the B. A. A athletic committee at the club headquarters, after due deliberation, Chairman Albert T. Hart of the Unicorn committee announced that the New Boston Arena will be the site of the games as usual this season.

For a time there was considerable talk that the meet would be staged at the New Madison Sq Garden at the North Station instead of the Boston Arena, but Chairman Hart spiked these rumors.

As in former years the Back Bay club will conduct its same high class set of games. No pains will be spared to bring the greatest athletes in the country to compete in the different events and to make the coming contests the greatest

Star Trio Quits N. Y. Soccer Eleven

New York, Oct. 10—Josef Rosenhoffer, Ladjo Groses and Leo Trucker, stars of the Brooklyn Wanderers, quit that team on the score they did not care to play so long as it is out of organized football.

The players have not signified their intention to join another eleven, but it is reported they are going over to the proposed new league.

These are the only known defections among the 160 or more players belonging to American Soccer League teams.

This week undoubtedly will see the start of court actions of one kind or another.

JIM BRISCOE DEFEATS RAY LIRHEIN IN 12 ROUNDS

Portland, Me., Oct. 10—Yankee Jimmy Briscoe, hard-hitting featherweight of Manchester, N. H., outslugged Raymond Lirhein of Montreal in their 12-round battle at the Arena A. A.

In the fifth round Briscoe scored two clean knockdowns, Lirhein each time taking advantage of the nine count as he rose to his knees.

It was a gruelling fight, and the New Hampshire boxer's superior hitting power more than counterbalanced his opponent's weight and Lirhein [illegible]

Somerville Enlarges Field for School Eleven

NEW STAND NOW BEING ERECTED

Frank Alciere, Faculty Manager, Responsible for New Interest Shown by Fans

By DICK McSWEENEY

Somerville, dormant in the football world for the past few years, has awakened from its athletic somnolence and is planning bigger and better things for its football team.

The first step which Somerville will take after its long slumber is the erection of wooden stands at Foss Field, the home grounds of the school football eleven.

These new stands are to be constructed opposite the old concrete stands, on the opposite side of the playing field, and they will accommodate 2000 persons. The stands will be retained for the rest of the season. Construction work will begin today and will be completed in time for the Medford game.

The Mayor and Board of Aldermen have given their enthusiastic support to the project, which is hailed by Somerville fandom as the initial movement toward furnishing Somerville with an athletic field which will compare creditably with those of other suburban high schools.

ALCIERE RESPONSIBLE

Who is responsible for this awakening of interest in Somerville's athletics. Who is behind this movement to infuse new spirit into Somerville fandom? The answer is: Frank Alciere, faculty manager of athletics.

Mr. Alciere is a graduate of Boston College and taught at Dorchester high school before coming to Somerville two years ago.

Last April he was appointed Faculty Manager of Athletics and immediately he went about finding ways and means to rejuvenate sports at the Somerville institution.

Upon looking over the accounts of the Athletic Treasury he found a deficit of $35. In an effort to remedy this deficit, Mr. Alciere went out personally and sold over 600 baseball season tickets.

At the end of the baseball season the coffers of the Athletic Treasury showed a profit of $960, the first time in many years that the annual sport had paid its own way.

Encouraged by his success with baseball, Alciere turned his attention to football. The gridiron sport had been given only half-hearted support by both students and Somerville residents in other years, but Alciere planned to change conditions.

BIGGEST CROWD EVER

First of all, he saw that the grid team was supplied with all necessary equipment, then he began a movement to raise the prestige of Somerville in the football sphere.

As a reward for his enthusiastic spirit, the largest crowd ever to attend an opening game at Somerville saw Chelsea downed, 25-0.

Over 10,000 people are expected to join Dilboy Field on Columbus Day to watch the gridiron aggregations of Medford and Somerville engage in combat.

Dempsey Has Made 2 Million Fighting

By JAMES L. HILDRETH

(Copyright, 1923, by International News Service)

New York, Oct. 10—"The fight game has been good to me. It has put me where I am today. For a chap of 33 I'm not bad off.

"I'm through as a fighter. I may have a real good fight or two in my system, but I'm not taking any chances. No cutting paper dolls for Jack Dempsey. I'm not going to try to come back.

"I'm proud of the friends I've made in the fight game and I hope I always will be able to come back before the public and say 'Hello' and that they will counter with a good old 'Hello Jack!'

Jack Dempsey is talking as he rides up Broadway, nodding to acquaintances and to people who recognize him. He is clothed in a neat gray serge suit and looks like an alert, athletic business man or a high powered salesman.

"How much have you made in the fight game and how well are you fixed?" the writer asked.

DREW $10,000,000

"I drew in $10,000,000 at least in the last ten fights I fought under the auspices of Tex Rickard,' replied the ex-heavyweight champion "Of that amount I got for myself at least $5,000,000. But, out of that $2,000,000, I've had expenses.

"You'd be surprised at all the 'cutting' on a championship share. But I've held on to plenty. They never will be holding benefits for yours truly. And some of my investments have turned out pretty well. Besides, I'm making out O. K. as an actor."

Rickard was quoted in the October issue of "The Ring," as saying for Dempsey." He said that in the eight world's heavyweight championship fights he has staged Dempsey participated in six of them—and played to more than $3,000,000. They "drew" as follows:

Dempsey-Willard	$452,822
Dempsey-Brennan	300,000
Dempsey-Carpentier	1,625,589
Dempsey-Firpo	1,171,404
Dempsey-Tunney	1,900,000
Dempsey-Tunney	2,658,660

In addition, Dempsey has participated in other fights that were not for the championship, which ran the total gate receipts over the $10,000,000 mark.

"I like the public and I hope I'll never be too old to come before them to resume old acquaintances," said Dempsey. "I'm going to keep an eye on the game and I guess I'll always be active. I simply couldn't just retire to the farm and stay there.

"Fighting spells you for other things. I would like to get into something in which I could spend the time I am through with the stage, that I would like and that would be worth while.

Something bigger than running a billiard hall or a bowling alley. I am not afraid of work, all my youth having been given to the fight game, but I can learn. Just what I will do I don't know.

"I always will have a strong interest in sports. I will never be too old to come out and watch a good fight. Yes, I like all branches of sport. My favorite sport? Football. I used to play football. I was a center. I'm not a bad ball player either.

My position on the team was catcher. I played forward and center on the basketball team, too, so you see I'm not a bad all-around athlete. If I do say so."

NEVER CHASED BY SCOUTS.

"Of course, the big leagues were never after me or anything like that. I think everybody who can should play baseball, because it develops teamwork more than any game."

Dempsey said that when he gives up acting he will retire to one of his ranches for a rest, indulge in golf and fishing to keep in condition and keep his mind occupied by raising pedigreed dogs and registered cows and horses.

He has three ranches near Fresno, Cal., and a $250,000 home in Los Angeles. He owns a restaurant in Salt Lake City, a block of city property in Fresno and has other investments. Not long ago he sold his Los Angeles hotel for $650,000 at a profit of $100,000.

The popular ex-champ had reached the Times sq. barbershop, where he was going to get shaved for his matinee appearance. Everybody in the place saluted him and from the barbers there came a chorus:

"Next!"

Babe and Lou on Barnstorming Tour

Bustin' Babe and Larrapin' Lou, the terrible twain of the world champion Yankees, are coming back to New York to make a post-season appearance at Dexter Park, Jamaica, Long Island, and Ebbetts field, Brooklyn, on Columbus Day.

Personally conducted by Christy Walsh, their business manager, Ruth and Gehrig are to go on tour for twenty games, the second of which is to be played at Syracuse on Saturday and the third at Montreal on Monday.

HORSE RACES FRIDAY AT HEIGHTS FAIR GROUNDS

New York, Oct. 10—With the special afternoon bill on October 12, motor racing returns to the day time for the balance of the season and will be continued after Columbus Day on Sunday afternoons at the Metropolitan Heights Fair Grounds, between Maspeth and Middle Village.

Invite Walker to Fordham-N. Y. Game

New York, Oct. 10—Mayor James J. Walker, ever a sports enthusiast was invited to attend the intercollegiate championship football clash between New York University and Fordham, to be played Saturday afternoon at the Polo Grounds.

The invitation came from both institutions, and it is expected the city's chief executive will be on hand to see the two Bronx rivals in action.

If the mayor can arrange his affairs for that day to suit the time of the game, starting at 2:30 p. m., he will be on hand to sit with the New York University cheering section during one half and with the Fordham group the other half of the game.

SCHOONER AND DWYER MEET AT GARDNER

Harry Dwyer of Athol will meet Al Schooner of Hartford, Ct., in the main bout of the Chain City A. C., Gardner, Mass., on Friday afternoon. Schooner has won his last seven fights by knockouts. He plans to challenge Jim Maloney if he beats Dwyer. Dwyer is a local boy and a tough puncher. It should make a formidable opponent for Schooner. This bout is a ten-round affair and will be held outdoors, but in case of rain it will be held indoors.

RACES CARDED FOR DRIVING CLUB OUTING

The Gentlemen's Driving club of Lynn will have a big day at Rockdale park, Peabody, on Friday, with racing for trotters, pacers and running races, in conjunction with their horse show.

There is expected to be a big display of horsemanship, with a wonderful entry list already received from the following: William Rhodes Riding School of Lynn, Swampscott Riding School, Salem Riding School, Danvers Riding School and Clifton Riding School.

SPEED DRIVERS IN TRIALS TODAY

Last-minute arrangements for the 2:08-mile exhibitions at the Rockingham Speedway have been completed and the last of the drivers who Aspires for the $32,000 purse will qualify today.

Never has such an all star assembly of drivers been entered in an event in this sport.

The Salem, N. H., saucer on the holiday will see 14 of the leading drivers of the world vying with each other in the final major racing event of the year. Not until the next Indianapolis event in May will such a galaxy of daredevils be gathered in the same tent.

Instead of the big Four, instead of Evans, Duray, Resch and Krein constituting the big Four, as was originally planned, there will be eight of the world's best drivers in the saddle.

Despite the heavy handicap of a head wind, the times made by the pilots indicate record breaking speed on the day of the event. The track never was faster, not so declared to permit such speed as these chaps can produce.

Duray and Resch will be fighting a private duel of their own as well as trying to win the big event, for Duray has kept in condition by playing golf all summer. Frederickson stated that Dutch Gainor has put on some weight, and he predicts that the boy from Calgary will have his best season.

Harvard Students Show Little Interest in Eleven

ONLY FIFTY SEE PUBLIC PRACTICE

Batchelder, Promising Back, Injured and Out of Game for Week

By TED LYNCH

The chief topic of conversation among football fans today is the lack of interest shown by the student of Harvard.

For many years all of Harvard's football practices have been of an utterly secret nature, and no members of the student body have been admitted to them. One lone march to the field just before the Jazz game has heretofore constituted the Harvard boys' only glimpse of the Crimson varsity except at the regularly scheduled games.

Yesterday, however, the coaches threw the gates open and announced in the Crimson, the student daily at Cambridge, that the students and the public would be admitted. Many thought there might be 1000 or more on hand to watch the scrimmage, cheer the team and in general display their college spirit.

ONLY 50 PRESENT

There were not more than 50 students on hand at the most.

Harvard, it seems, is different from other places.

[illegible] concerned. [illegible] tough business of football [illegible] Holbrook [illegible] back and to [illegible] lack of [illegible] years [illegible] is out of the game indefinitely with [illegible]

Another back Sam Batchelder [illegible] member of the Batchelder football team forward passing combination is out for a week. He was injured in the scrimmage yesterday and will not be able to [illegible] this weekend. His loss for one week [illegible] matter much, but the fact that he is to miss a week's work with the team will [illegible] Army game only a short way off [illegible] to prove a hard knock [illegible] Harvard.

These [illegible] no doubt that Henry Gilpin [illegible] and it seemed reasonable to [illegible] at the start of the year is up against a stiff assignment. He has been out of the game [illegible] first day of practice and, although he is rejoining the team this week, his loss of practice is likely to prove very much of a handicap to him in his effort to win a regular berth.

Coach Horween is planning another scrimmage for this afternoon. The second of the present week. In it, he plans to start Pickard at left end, Barrett at left tackle, Treat at left guard, Benjamin Tickner at center, William Tichnor at right guard, Clark at right tackle and Douglas at right end on the varsity line.

His starting backs are to be Putnam at quarter, French and Harrington at halfbacks, and Harper at fullback. Given [illegible] may be unable to be present at practice on account of his usual exam [illegible] and, with Tatelbaum out, Hoyt[illegible] may be used at right halfback.

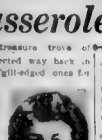
Martha Lee Tells of Casserole Dishes

OUT of a treasure trove of recipes collected way back in 1908 come three grill-edged ones for our casseroles

Casserole Dish—

One and one-half lbs. lean beef, chicken or lamb, 3 cups boiling water, 1 cup carrots, 2 small onions, 3 tbsps. flour, 3 potatoes, any left-over vegetables such as peas, lima beans, celery, etc.



Martha Lee.
C—Bachrach

Cut meat into cubes and sauté. Then place in casserole. Add two cups boiling water or stock; cover and set on stove or radiator of fireless cooker while it is heating. Add more fat to frying and in it saute the carrots cut in cubes and the whole onions.

Sprinkle with 2 tbsps flour and season. Add 1 cup water, stirring until liquid thickens. Add left-overs and turn into casserole with meat. The potatoes may be latticed and spread on top or may be cut into cubes or balls.

Cook in a low oven or in fireless cooker from 2 to 10 hours. If cooked on stove it may be necessary to add more water. If possible, do not open casserole.

And here's the next, appetizingly called

Italian Delight — One-half lb spaghetti, 1 small onion, ½ can corn ½ cup condensed tomato soup, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. paprika, 2-3 cup olive oil, ½ cup grated cheese, 1 clove of garlic, 1 green pepper, 1 tsp. cayenne, 1 tsp. Worcestershire.

Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water one-half hour. Cup onion, garlic, and green pepper and fry in olive oil until golden brown. Add tomato soup, salt, paprika, cayenne and 1 cup Worcestershire. Mix thoroughly, heat, stir in part of the cheese till melted then add corn and spaghetti, stir a few minutes, put into buttered pudding dish, sprinkle with grated cheese bake 45 minutes

Casserole Dish 2 c. cooked meat 2 c. bread crumbs, 1 can Campbell's spaghetti, 1 pt. cream, 1 tbsp. butter 4 tbsps. flour, 4 c. broth, salt and pepper.

Cut meat and bread into cubes. Melt butter add flour and add cooked soup. Season and combine with meat, bread crumbs, olives and spaghetti. Place in casserole and cook for about 20 minutes. This is improved by adding left-over peas.

Lamb Surprise—Grease a casserole. Put into it 2 cups cooked rice, preferably hot, cover with cheese over the top, and dot it with butter. Push the rice to the sides of the casserole. Have in the cavity left in the center, about 1½ c. diced cold shoulder of lamb, seasoned well first, and mixed with a slice or two of chopped up bacon.

Pour 1½ c. tomatoes over all, cover the top with buttered crumbs, bake in a hot oven until thoroughly heated, and the crumbs well browned.

Lamb Casserole—2 pounds breast of lamb, cut small; 2 c. diced potatoes, 1 finely chopped onion, 1 c. canned tomatoes, seasoning, 2 c. diced carrots.

Cut lamb in small pieces, roll in flour, and brown well in hot bacon fat with the onion. Put in buttered casserole with the tomatoes and 1 c. hot water. Bake 2 hours.

Add onions and carrots, and bake ½ hour longer.

Add a little more water from time to time and thicken the gravy if it is too thin. Serve very hot with fresh baking powder biscuits or these delicious.

Plain Rolls—Put one-third cup cup of butter, 4 tbsps. of sugar and 1 tsp. of salt in a large bowl. Add 2 cups of scalding hot milk. When cool, add 1 yeast cake, dissolved in ½ cup of lukewarm water. Then add from 5 to 6 cups of bread flour. Beat well with a wooden salted spoon instead of kneading.

Add enough flour so that the dough will not stick to your fingers when you touch it. Set it in a warm place, covered, to rise, and when it has doubled its bulk cut down and turn over again. Roll thin and cut with a moon-shaped cutter or in any preferred shape. This dough set in the morning can be baked for dinner.

If you are going to set it over night half a yeast cake will be sufficient.

And here's a pot roast that has the peculiarity of being good either hot or cold

Pot Roast—Try out fat cut from a four pound piece of beef suitable for pot roast. Sear the meat in the fat on all sides until well browned. Put the meat in a deep covered kettle. Pour 2 cups of water in the frying pan and four this gravy over the meat.

On top of the meat arrange a carrot, diced small, a turnip, also diced and perhaps a slice or two of turnip all cut in tiny squares. On top of this lay one large onion sliced thin. Dust over with flour and salt and pepper.

Put in the oven and bake slowly at least 4 hours, basting now and then with the gravy in the pan, add a little hot water if necessary. This will give you a deliciously tender roast with a rich vegetable sauce.

Faithfully yours,

MARTHA LEE.

it delightedly, for board meetings or for debutante teas, and with optical effects most pleasing. Mrs. Bernard C. Weld's costume for Junior Division discussions was of dark, rich purple, an ensemble. Mrs. Weld is only just home from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Wales Emmons, the former Miss Frances Weld, who now is chatelaine of a Long Island establishment.

MISS ELEANOR MASON IS back in town after a summer at the Shore, with a most becoming coat of tan and an amazing seat for her daily duties. A girl of the social set, when she folds away her butterfly wings and turns seriously to business, does so most wholeheartedly and gives scant encouragement to pursuits merely frivolous. This season Miss Mason will add decoratively to the staff of a smart little shop in Newbury st., not the same one she served in last season, but one equally distinctive for its ownership and patronage. Society girls in shops are no longer a novelty. Neither are important matrons who go in serious for trade. Their numbers are increasing with the seasons.

MRS. FRANK SHAW HAS concluded a country summer spent in the wooded seclusion of Nine Acre Corners in Concord and has herself to town, preparatory to a busy season selling chic confections to debutantes and dowagers. There will be a debutante in the shaw family one of these days, such time as Miss Pauline Shaw emerges from the school girl chrysalis and spreads gauzy wings to bear social flames. A long season of travel and study abroad has been Miss Shaw's recent educational portion, in company with a cicerone and pretty matron, Mrs. Lyman Rice.

SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY has lifted the baton over Boston's justly famous orchestral aggregation and an audience of caste and consequence has settled down complacently for its favorite musical "Friday afternoon," deep in the satisfaction of another Symphony season well begun. Symphony Hall on opening day is nothing so much as a joyous reunion ground. The regulars who have owned season tickets for lo, these many years, are out en masse; all of the town's aristocratic background that considers attendance a sacred duty and high privilege, and bequeathes Symphony tickets to posterity along with its stocks and bonds. The dynamic Koussevitsky is used to ovations—but his reception was a top notcher even for so popular a Symphony conductor.

To Have and to Hold Is Happiness, Says Miss Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX,
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"TO have and to hold forever"

That is the way old fashioned form of conveyance read.

To have and to hold forever!" The quaint legal phrase expresses, too, the spirit of olden marriages. For a man's wife was his body and soul, to "have and hold" in fact and he might own, according to ancient statutes, beat her with a stick thicker than his thumb. But for the rest, she was his to do with as he chose.

Nowadays all that is changed. A woman is no longer regarded as a thing. Even when it comes to marriage, we realize that love is the one thing we can hold—no longer! And modern marriage is founded on love.

Certainly, a husband and wife could live up to all the responsibilities they assume. But when love dies, the spirit of the marriage is gone, only the empty shell remains. How important, then, that a wife mould from the very first realize to hold her husband's love and prevent

"Yes, my wife and I have been married 10 years. We have two children. And we still love each other!"

I overheard a handsome young married man making this confidence last summer on shipboard and I wondered what manner of woman the wife might be, who so nobly held the undivided devotion of this most attractive man.

Later, I met her. The two were enjoying a well-earned vacation together, leaving the children for a fortnight with her mother.

She was quietly dressed, but with exquisite taste and sense of style, suitable, most careful thought and economy went into the selection of her clothes, rather than a great deal of money.

The most exquisite thing one had noted during a moment spent in their stateroom, was a negligee of both of gold tissue and rich shades of black and crimson silk, which brought out perfectly her natural rich color and brunette prettiness. Her daintiness and every detail of her grooming were perfect. Then I realized that this wise young woman, throughout ten years of marriage, despite the cares of motherhood and housekeeping, has taken time to remain lovely and alluring in her husband's eyes, reserving for hours spent alone with him her most winning ways and enchanting graces. Little wonder she is still his sweetheart!

The first essential is to choose your man wisely, for there are some men and women who are too small in to remain steadfast—they are born quitters! Study him, know him, make sure he is responsible and trustworthy—then if you love him, marry him! Your romance will last as long as you make it last.

You can hold your husband by loving him deeply, loyally, trustingly, joyously. That men prefer a woman of whom they are not sure may hold true in fictions, but it certainly does not in marriage. Every man needs, more than all else, to be absolutely sure of the love of the One Woman, whom he has wed, and an unwavering affection at home.

"I've been married three times" commented a certain beautiful and much divorced siren, self complacently, in announcing her engagement to the fourth.

"What a wonderful woman" the thoughtless may exclaim, "to attract and win four husbands!"

"What a dismal failure as a woman" would be the more logical criticism. "For she has not been able to hold one husband."

A man needs to feel that he is wanted, admired and loved by the woman he loves and marries. Do not expect constant demonstrations of affection from your husband, his will tire of telling you 50 times a day how much he loves you. That is taken for granted, also he would not have married you.

Without forcing your affection on him, or asking him anxiously, tearfully, whether he still cares, make yourself so sweet, so amusing and entertaining, clever and altogether desirable that he will feel impelled to assure himself that he still is the lucky man you love.

Keep your sensitive feelings locked away where an irritable mood or occasional flash of temper will not shatter them. When you are discouraged or confused, do the duty nearest at hand—washing dishes or making coffee or ironing—which has a strangely soothing influence on a ruffled disposition. Try to correct, not your husband's faults, but your own. Keep gay and lighthearted, up-to-date and well groomed, not taking yourself too solemnly, but realizing the light touch, so that your husband can relax in your company and be proud of you always. Feed him well and flatter him a little, artfully. Never tell him quite all—remain just a bit of fragrant mystery to him. Adjust yourself sensibly to his ways. Above all else, cultivate tolerance, avoiding arguments over trifles. Be his lovely comrade and playmate, as well as helpmate. If you live up to these suggestions—and I know you can—you should be sure of happiness and make your husband happy.

If you married your husband because you loved him deeply and truly you will feel richly repaid for all sacrifice, self-denial, adjustments and hard work.

Road to Leadership

By LUCY LOWELL

THE boss evolves. The one and only sort of a person who can become a successful leader is the one with qualities of leadership in his bones.

The boss who has to be set up high and then proclaimed one in authority by the owner of the shop never will be boss in actual fact. He has had greatness thrust upon him and, unlike the great men of Shakespeare's time, today's really great are those who achieve greatness.

However, it is the fact that in practically every place where workers are employed there is one, though the number is by no means many, whom the owner would announce to the rest of the gang that he is the new boss and would take hold and show everybody what's what.

And every now and then one of these, by hook or crook, or some species of mesmerism, succeeds in persuading the owner to try it out. Various situations result, but nearly always the owner wakes up in time to snatch at least part of his business from ruin.

The person who possesses those qualities of leadership knows very well indeed that being boss means more than just sitting in the front office. He knows that it means responsibility, initiative, endless toil, the ability to take criticism without flinching, the will to give, to play the game, stick for the finish.

And he who possesses these and knows he possesses them need have no reason for speculating upon how he is going to get to the seat of the mighty; he need have no cause for worry as to who will make him a boss.

He may know that time and events will put him where he wants to go. Up will evolve.

A Farewell Hike

By LUCY LOWELL

THIS is the time of year when it is wise to plan for the last of the summer's journeys into the woods and fields; the last week-end in the country before Jack Frost swoops upon the gardens, laying low all the brave flowers and setting flame to the foliage.

These are the days when the air takes on a new amazing clearness, when is seems charged with such a white, scintillating light that you feel as if you were living on the inside of a crystal.

There is a new and vivid gold in the sunshine and never have skies been so ravishing blue. Even the green finally has reached that emerald velvet perfection promised all summer and only now fulfilled when a hint of autumn's tang is on the breeze early mornings and after the sun sinks in the west.

The woods still are flying their green banners, building leafy caverns of mystery beneath deeply overhanging branches. But here and there you find yellow midst the green; sometimes only a bough which has turned and sometimes a sapling whose leaves are the color of a ripe pumpkin. And in a place where a marsh stretches for many miles high on a mountain plateau there are maples which look as if all the rouge pots in the world had been emptied upon their branches.

By all means get to the country before summer is gone!

Who's Reasonably Dissatisfied with This Town . . . and Why Not?

ANY good citizen's reason for being satisfied with this town is an asset to the community. But if there's any way of discovering one or a dozen reasons for being reasonably dissatisfied with economic conditions as they are here and now . . . THERE'S an opportunity to make some REAL PROGRESS.

And there is a way. It's done by searching out and studying the actual facts of this community's situation in all the important economic and civic phases of activity wherein this town meets with competition . . . Modern Business calls this "Research."

Charles F. Kettering, vice president and general director of the General Motors Research Laboratories once said, "The full, low-down reason for research is to keep your customers reasonably dissatisfied with what they have." That's merely his playful way of saying that in order to maintain continual prosperity through the changing conditions of years, you must find ways of providing something progressively more desirable for your customers.

TOWNS SHOULD PLEASE THEIR "CUSTOMERS"

This town, also, has its "customers" . . . the individuals and enterprises that have found good reasons for maintaining their homes or headquarters here, good reasons for buying, selling or enjoying whatever this town provides.

This town has its "prospective customers" . . . the people, the capital, the commercial and industrial companies that might be induced to come here for good, sound reasons of fact mutually beneficial to them and to the whole community.

Youth and industries always tend to go and stay where they are convinced the opportunities are good and conditions are favorable.

Anywhere in America, the progressive community of today is the one that is taking stock of its actual 1928 resources, advantages, industrial conditions and needs . . . and taking steps to insure continued employment for its people through balanced growth and development along the right industrial and civic lines.

JOIN FORCES WITH THE NEW ENGLAND COUNCIL

In New England, progressive communities have many advantages . . . but none more potent for progress than this that you and your town, for instance, can have, through the New England Council, guidance and assistance of inestimable value in such development work as this.

The New England Council is the centralized cooperative institution sponsored in 1923 by the Governors of the six New England states for the purpose of putting the best available information, the accumulated experience and the ablest leadership in all New England activities at the service of all New England . . . including you and your town.

STOLEN LOVE

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Author of "The SECRET STUDIO."

Will Any Man Love a Girl Who Has a Past She Tries to Hide?

CHAPTER 21

BILL was gone, and nobody knew where he was.

Ruth consoled herself with a young man from the Dutch East Indies, a young man who wore flat derby hats and fawn-colored spats. He spoke with a thick, syrupy accent, and had a wife who kept to the house because of some obscure spinal ailment.

"So there's no chance of her making trouble," Ruth said, "and he helps to pass the time. It's a cinch I won't marry Rollo until the old man comes through with some more."

"You would if you loved him," Joan said in the serious, good-little-girl voice that always made Ruth laugh.

"Love! What's that? There's no such thing!" she flung the expensive hat she had been trying on back into its box and slammed the cover shut.

"She's thinking about Bill," Joan thought, and a queer, jagged pain shot through her.

Ruth kept her from forgetting Bill. When she wasn't talking about him she was thinking about him, Joan knew she was. Looking out of the window with a pensive look in her bright dark eyes. Looking at Joan, long and speculatively, wondering about her and Bill, wondering how much he had loved her, how much she had loved him . . .

"It's failed me both . . . Ruth, too . . . we're in the same boat, she and I . . ."

He was in Joan's thoughts constantly now. It wasn't that she wanted him back. She would have cowered from him had he come. But the memory of that love that had once seemed so clean and beautiful and proud rankled. It had been dragged in the mud. She had loved him, loved him prodigally, without fear, scornful of consequences, impatient of restraint. And he had smiled at her with that beautiful clear blue eyes that seemed so loyal and true . . . and stepped out of her life like a shaft of sunlight. Bright and warm for a minute gone so soon . . . nothing left to touch, nothing to call to . . . just gone . . .

Christmas came. A lonely day in spite of the mound of tissue paper packages Maisie piled on the library table under the imitation Christmas tree with its fat green and red and yellow balls, and the star of Bethlehem on top. Curtis' gift came in a big wicker basket. Silver Princess, a pedigreed Persian cat, the most beautiful Joan had ever seen, but too much feline aristocrat to be a real comfort.

The New Year's Eve party at the Barstows' was another disappointment. Getting ready for it, slipping into the honey-colored chiffon dress that Francine had given her at Christmas time, Joan felt unutterably still while Maisie crawled around on her knees, making sure the long, full skirt hung just right, and letting cool, damp whiffs of jasmine spray into her hair from Maisie's cut glass atomizer, was the best part.

There were too many people at the party. Too many inimical, laughing girls. Too many monsterous, bored looking young men who were tired of dancing and wanted to take her down to supper. The same real stuff . . . come on—we'll never be missed."

"Curtis is the only one I cared anything about and I hardly saw him," she confided to Maisie on the way home, of course, he was the host, but Mrs. Barstow never let him come within a mile of me."

"So that's it. Well, I'll fix you, you old crow!" Maisie said to herself. "Pretending to run Joan's askin' her to all those social functions, and then treating her like that!"

She decided on a little dinner

"My Hair is a Fright"

Edna Wallace Hopper, the stage favorite, in her sixties still graces the footlights with the vivacious charm of a flapper. In an interview she remarks that women always apologize when trying on a new dress of hat. How many of them say, "Of course, it will look better when my hair is in decent shape."

So it is well to know that you can always keep your hair looking its best.

Miss Hopper with some forty years of stage work behind her, knows the tricks of attracting. Among the most important she names a fresh, lovely wave. She has found the perfect curling fluid to keep your hair alluring regardless of circumstances.

Wave and Sheen, she calls it. A liquid dressing which not only preserves the wave but gives your hair a soft, fascinating sheen. Try it on your freshly shampooed hair.

party of her own. "Yes, and there won't be anyone there but him and Johnnie—"

She planned the menu first, every bit of it, from the tomato soup with whipped cream to the cafe noir and after-dinner mints, before she invited Curtis by telephone.

"Is this Mr. Barstow? I was just wondering . . . this is Mis Kimmer, Maisie Kimmer, Joan calls me Maisie, everybody does . . . I was just wondering if some night you wanted to come out to my place for dinner? Oh, that'll be fine . . . no, not tonight, that is I wasn't thinking of tonight . . . could you come next Thursday?"

The dinner was a great success. Maisie knew Curtis had enjoyed it, and when it was over she sat up on deald, "Now I'll just step over to—"

And before the words were out of her mouth Joan was shaking her head and raising her eyebrows, signalling her not to say it, but she kept right on, anyway. She hadn't given this dinner for nothing. I'll just step over to Mis' Harvey's, came you young folks'll want a little time to yourselves—"

When Maisie came home, at half pes 10, Curtis had gone. "Why—what happened—what d.d he go so soon for?"

Joan looked up from her book with a rather watery smile. "It isn't so early, is it?"

"For a young man to love with a girl it certainly is. You're keeping something from me, Johnnie, an' I don't think it's fair—after I try—"

"I know, Maisie, I know. I'm a miserable, ungrateful thing, only I'm not really—I do love you, Maisie. But you see I—I don't want Curtis to—to love me—"

"What"

Joan began to laugh, helplessly. "Maisie—if you could see your face! It's so funny—"

"Never mind my face—why don't you want a nice young man to love you? I never heard of anything so plain silly! You're born dull."

"I know—but I didn't mean it that way . . . You don't understand . . . to love Curtis, I sort of love him, too, only I don't want him to say anything about it now—not yet—and he almost did—"

"He almost did—and he didn't! Now Ma.sie was mad!

"Curtis put him off too long," she said. "There's a limit to every man's patience. The time may come when you want him an' he's changed his mind."

Curtis telephoned twice, but Joan didn't want to see him. "Johnnie, an' I don't think it's fair—after I try—"

So Curtis went out to the links to play golf.

Mrs. Curtis Barstow also went out She went to Sausalito. "It's probably a wild goose chase," she thought, as she sat back against the cushions of the big, comfortable car, waiting for the auto ferry to cross the bay. "But it's a chance, and I'll not leave one unturned . . . there must be something queer, she's so mysterious about it . . . besides he really seemed interested in Susanna the other night. Dear! I can't just find something . . ."

The worn front steps of the old Van Fleet house sagged under Mrs. Barstow's slight weight. The door bell jangled complainingly. After a long time there came the sound of shuffling steps, the door swung open grudgingly.

An old woman with a long yellow face and her checked shawl tied around her head in a little knot under her chin, stared at her through the crack.

"You want in the parlor," she said when she understood it was a caller for the Van Fleet.

How cold it was in the long, high-ceilinged room. How damp and musty!

Tick tock, tick tock, tick tock, the bronze clock on the white marble mantel ticked off the seconds sadly.

Once she stood up to go. It was silly to wait so long in the cold, musty room. And still, to come all the way for nothing . . .

Finally, the door opened, the old woman with the red shawl was back. "Miss Eyrie is out," she said, "and Miss Rube is lying down."

"But I've come from San Francisco. Couldn't I—"

"You could come back," the old woman said, "some other time."

She stalked ahead into the hall, opened the big front door. "Good day, madam." Lyla Barstow was being dismissed like a book agent Bang! That was the door closing behind her.

The chill of the old house had struck into her very bones. She sat twenty minutes in front of the blazing fire at the Grave', just the other side of the hill, before she began to thaw out.

"And rude . . . Lottie, are they always so rude?"

Plump little Mrs. Gray laughed comfortably. "Always. Poor as church mice, and much too haughty to associate with any of us. So Curtis is interested in the girl . . . dear, dear. What's she like? I haven't seen her in years. Rather a beauty, as I recall"

Mrs. Barstow nodded. "Yes, strikingly so. And I'm afraid Curtis is, well—serious. That's why I called—she has been so mysterious about them . . . what sort of a girl was she, Lottie—"

"Oh, a quiet little thing. Not like the girls nowadays. They never let her play with the other children of course. I know how you feel about Curtis . . . still, some of the flappers are terrible . . . simply terrible. Did you hear about the Hammond girl? The Leslie Hammond Constance, you know. I had it from Carrie Pierson—you know what a gossip she is—so don t let it go any further, but . . ."

Mrs. Barstow listened, sipping her hot tea . . . the Hammond girl, who had been Curtis' partner at his first dance . . . what was the world coming to? At least, Joan was good . . . that was something . . .

Joan lay on the couch near the window, with a magazine propped up before her. She couldn't read She wanted . . . what did she want? She didn't know. Impossible to be lonely with Maisie bustling back and forth every few minutes, but she was lonely . . . as lonely as Robinson Crusoe on his desert isle.

"Again!" Maisie scolded, "All that doorbell does is ring, ring, ring"

"Why don't you let it ring and not answer it?" Joan grinned, stretching a long, slender foot in its yellow Chinese slipper.

"Well, I don't know . . . habit, I guess," and she padded to the door, still grumbling

"Oh!" it was Curtis, looking rather young and sheepish standing there with the wind and a few flecks red from the wind and a long florist's box under one arm. Such a big box, with a cut in one end, and long stems sticking out, like tails, Roses, of course. Oh—I wasn't expecting to see you—"

"Can't I come in?" he asked, laughing, and stepping into the hall at the same time.

"Joan kind of wanted to be quiet today," she began doubtfully, but Curtis always over-awed her, and he was already pulling off his big coat.

"Why, Curtis Barstow! Didn't Maisie tell you to stay away from me and my cold?"

But Joan held out both hands to him gladly, and her eyes, the color of the sea-green opals, were flecked with happy light. "Curtis . . . I am glad you came, really. And a box—what's in the box?"

"Open it and see."

"Ha, I've guessed! I haven't seen them since—oh, for so long—" She buried her face in their fragrant, fragrance. "Not since . . . I lived in the old house, with my aunts—they're like—like home," she confided shakily. And the loneliness came back. Overwhelming loneliness, crushing her, frightening her. Old memories. Memories of the La France roses in the old garden across the bay. Bill's love and laughter, and another spring, of promises that would never be fulfilled.

"Joan, you're crying!"

"No, I'm not!" She tried to laugh, but she couldn't. She knew it all clear at last. All the years to come. All the years of loneliness. Growing older and older like Hagar in the Bible.

"Getting ahead," as Francine promised, getting ahead and what for? What's the good of success when you're lonely, when you don't really belong to anyone, and no one cares whether you live or die, spring hard and dry, without any hope, all the sweet, soft things dashed . . .

And through the loneliness through the foreboding that chilled her, through the sweet, heavy scent of the roses, she saw Curtis reaching out his arms to her.

With a little gob she went into them, hid her face against the rough wool of his sleeve. This was peace . . . this was rest . . . everything she needed . . . "Curtis, don't ever let me go"

"My dear, of course I won't . . . Joan, you've never kissed me . . . will you"

She gave him her lips, crying still

"Johnnie, don't cry, it's nothing to cry about, . . . because you love me. Is it? Is it so bad as that? Didn't you want to love me Joan?"

She was quiverinr in his arms quivering as if she were afraid Johnnie, stop being cross! Don't smile at me . . . look up . . . tell me you do love me, Johnnie . . . You do, don't you?"

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

AS you walk down the avenue and watch the parade of beauty which passes in long review before your eyes, do you ever stop to give a thought as to just WHAT is the secret of the American girl's loveliness?

And hearken—here's the secret plant, tended and watched over by zealous and jealous guardians, carefully tended and petted that when she's transplanted into the sunlight of the garden she wilts and withers. Not the American girl! Her whole life is an out-of-doors one. Tennis, hiking, yachting, riding, golf—all these give her the glowing ruddiness and healthy and hairy! That's why she's beautiful and there you have the secret in a nutshell.

But with all Happiness that's the secret of beauty ... of love, for one brings the other and the combination of the two spells the love feature on earth—The American girl bless her heart not saying much. Do what I tell you—or you don't get paid for the trip."

This was logic, however unbearable

The perspiration of fright now gave place to that of spiritual anguish as Punjari head the girl in his arms during a century long minute in which his master reloaded and sent another bullet from the big-bore gun into the breast of the great beast. And then, horror upon horror, the white gentleman caught the girl in his own arms and, unmindful of his own great estate, started on his long strides across the fields toward the street of the village.

Protesting in his native tongue lest he receive another threat of non payment Punjari followed, bearing the heavy gun. The white man was barely half way across the field when a new surprise came to them

Dancing down the street came hundreds of lights—torches in the hands of priests and the men of the town The two reverberations of that heavy bore gun had been mistaken for the earth and sky-rocked by big game hunters had visited the village before, and more than once had the district been rid of poor hunters by British officials and sportsmen. Their sacred rites had indeed, appeased the gods and now under the leadership of old Maiji they set forth to find what the might find How the miracle had happened they knew not and cared not. But under the high heavens of this eventful evening the native mind had veered from that earlier panic to frenzied joy

And, as they beheld the tall white figure in the pith helmet striding the sturdy swing of the super-race, they cheered and fairly screeched with their delight

In an instant the white man and his turbaned companion were surrounded by a dancing, yelling mob of natives

"Tell them to go away, Punjari" ordered the white man, as he pressed forward with difficulty "And ask where I can take this young lady"

Punjari jabbered valiantly, in local dialect, and as his words the natives fell back. Old Maiji assumed authority, advanced and made obeisance to the great white hunter

Now the venerable high priest addressed the savior of the community in Hindustani, which the white man understood.

"We are thy servants, oh, master Our village is at thy command. My house shall be your home, sahib, and it is the largest for many miles about. If I may lead you it is an honor."

The girl still in his arms, the white man strode on, followed by his faithful servant. A sudden thought struck him, as he caught a adoring glimpse of many of the natives dancing on toward the meadow where the slain big tiger, indeed had first been cut

"Tell those gay lads to leave the monkey with my little wife—one of my eyes sings his silly song to keep the evil spirits away. Tell the more shooting, and must be at there, this time, Punjari And by the way, don't overdo it, you either Gun I dropped by that tree . . . the rest of our luggage which was dropped when you started to run, my brave buckie."

Some words, sahib, a not all familiar to my ears, but I think I understand enough," assured Punjari, who promptly stood after the riotous villagers bent to the ordinary vengeance upon the most unpleasant terror of the neighborhood.

Old Maiji led the way to his house, of which he was amazingly proud It was but an idle thing to do, for the huts in the village. Less most of the native quarters of the city, mainly of upcast mud and straw. But Laughter and cheering greeted the ill-fated tiger, which was then carried back.

The hunter told the old unconscious girl upon a mat in the hut Maiji decided once if the white man stared in surprise

"This girl, dear sir, look like a Hindu to me, he muttered, and turned to the ancient man. It is Hindustani he commands. Perhaps some robes to throw over her And, tell me, who is this young white lady to you, Punjari? inquired the old man. "Until she danced from tonight, in answer to my pea I have never seen her even in the village She came in a service of the gods when my own weak people were falling in one of the last night of the spring season. Her hair, she is the daughter of the gods"

She is my daughter, Sahib I am not to tell, the wandering Jew and with my wife, Sita, and this boy later, and on . . . Road.

She has journeyed many miles this day, to seek food and lodging at the few rajahs for our music and her dancing It was the will of the gods that I should be settled in the city of the supreme test And it was the divine power which sent you on your path with the girl in your arms for no one is to . . . and old and good, not above all, she dances like the gods

"I mmt" mused the white hunter rubbing his chin, thoughtfully. And on his own tongue he added such a curse, "And I say she is good to gaze upon and enjoys too good to be tramping around the land foreaken jungle country with a couple of low caste coolie natives like you Her hair's lighter brown than most Hindu girls And one does not usually get parched, and pretty . . . A bit her face Well, I'd better to at least to my self-respect to . . . Tarnit to the old monk on he said in fluent native Punjari, your wife and your self in the kitchen out of . . . She . . . and fright I will leave Lucy . . . in the woman comes Bring water and attend her Tell my servant . . . to be in readiness now."

In his absence Punjari spoke to his wife and fanned the ashes of the hut fire I gave this young . . . into a comfortable and then leave her to her own people

I don't know, but it won't take long to find out," was the vigorous reply. The white man turned decisively upon the elderly Hindu and who had claimed parenthood

Lucky?

When she comes to the footlights to acknowledge Broadway's applause of her marvelous dancing in Sidesaks of New York," theatregoers will forward to admire her youthful charms, the fresh crispness of her rose-petal skin and her gleaming black hair. She's Virginia Clark of 143 Twenty-third St., Jackson Heights, New York City.

"When friends say I'm lucky to have such clear skin and soft, shining hair," says Miss Clark, "I have to tell them it isn't luck at all. In my case, it is the result of care. For my hair, I use the simple method that's all the rage among New York girls now. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush each time you use it. This makes my scalp feel just tingly and keeps away all dandruff. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean I don't have to shampoo nearly so often as I did. It makes my hair soft and easy to dress; holds it in place; and gives it more lustre than brilliantine."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; makes it fairly sparkle. Dandruff disappears when you use Danderine. Waves, set with it, stay in longer. It isn't oily and doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Over five million used a year!

WEDDING PROBLEMS

DEAR MRS. BEECHAM

After receiving an engagement ring, how long after should a couple's name before announcing the engagement to the world? What is the great many of my friends have seen the ring and the wedding is not to take place for a year.

2. A friend wrote to me for my answer soon, but as I will not be engaged for a year, would that be proper?

3. Would it be proper for me to pass an afternoon church calling wearing a white dress with one, and a white hat with the other? I change to a business dress and put on a reception hat at . . . to get a set to

THE fact that you are wearing your engagement ring is the best way to announce your engagement So, if you wish to have an announcement of your engagement in the newspapers, you should give it out as soon as possible after you begin to wear the ring

2. I would be far better to have the shower nearer the date of your wedding

3. Yes this is correct. You do not need to pass a reception if you do not wish to

CREAM OF MAGNESIA

Better than Soap or Cold Cream

The newest discovery in beauty culture is that cream of magnesia is much better for the complexion than any soap or cold cream; it beautifies the skin instantly, in the same way that the milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. It reduces enlarging pores to the finest smoothest texture. Almost as if by magic. Being astringent it dries away the tell tale lines of age you will marvel at the effect of your first facial massage. It rejuvenates the pale so wonderfully that any woman over twenty five at once looks at least five years younger. It's marvelous how magic magnesia. Combine black heads cocoanut oil, skin and clears the face of pimples.

And because it is so mild, mothers can safely tended and petted that when she's transplanted into the sunlight of the garden she wilts and withers. Not the American girl! AUCTION BRIDGE
by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

THE INDIRECT ASSIST

To pass partner's bid over an intervening pass, and subsequently to bid a different suit in affect an assist of partner's bid, an indirect assist, showing precisely normal expectancy in partner's suit as well as the requisite strength for an independent bid. To illustrate consider the bidding by South, the dealer, and North, his partner, with the following holdings:

Spades: J 9 5; hearts: 4 2; diamonds: A K J 8 7; clubs: K 4

Spades A K 8 6 3, hearts: 10 8 1 diamonds: 5 2; clubs 4 3 2.

South bids one Spade; West pass North pass; East two Hearts; South, not holding rebid strength, now passes; West pass, North three Diamonds.

North, by bidding three Diamonds on the second round, showed that he could have bid two on the first round, had he wished to deny normal support for Spades. By bidding Diamonds on the second round, instead of giving a direct spade assist, North does not deny Spade support but does deny support in excess of normal, to wit in excess of 3 cards of suit.

East, bidding three Hearts, Bound now assured of normal Spade support, rebids Spades, holding as a dose five cards of the suit, and a side trick in the Ace of Clubs.

Had North bid his Diamond suit on the first round, thus denying normal Spade support, South could not have rebid. Had North passed Spades on the second round instead of bidding his Diamond suit he would have missed the opportunity to show his partner the precise nature of his Spade holding, information that would be especially valuable to partner in case of an original bid with but four cards in the suit.

The tactics explained in today's article are illustrated in the play of the following hand:

B.—A fella can't be drinkin poison.

A.—I bought two bottles of gin in a drug store and took some of the stuff, and I'd a swore I was goin' blind.

B.—Yea?

A.—Next morning, to make sure it was the gin affectin' my eyes, I took another drink and my eyes went bad again.

B.—Is that a fact?

A.—That's a fact. I concluded right then that it don't pay to drink no more poison. I had nearly a bottle left so I gave it to a friend.

THE HUMAN BRAIN

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Little head little wit;
Big head dead as it."

THIS amusing old couplet, which sounds like a spiteful emanation from some small-headed genius, might be thought to find vindication in the reported results of an investigation conducted by Dr. C. R. Langworthy of Johns Hopkins medical school of the brains of porpoises. These animals, it appears, have much larger brains and bigger and more convoluted cerebral hemispheres than men have.

To be sure the animals themselves are much larger than we are, being in fact, cousins to the whale, but then there comes that disarming statement about the convolutions of their cerebral hemispheres. We have always been told by the experts that it was not so much the size of the human brain that gave it its exposed intellectual force as the number and complexity of those very convolutions.

But according to this report it seems that the porpoise has superior brain quality as well as quantity; at least as far as the anatomist's scalpel can discover. Such an immense literature has been built up on the evolutionary importance of brain development in giving the human race the supremacy over the other inhabitants of our planet that this investigation, if it is going to challenge the accepted teaching on this subject, must be pushed to the limit.

What use has the porpoise for so large and highly developed a brain? It is difficult to be convinced that those animals do any thinking as we understand thought. But in that case a big and complicated brain must have other duties to perform besides those that we believe to characterize it. What is there, then, about the structure or life of the porpoise that can reasonably be supposed to call for the employment of so remarkable a physiological machine, apparently as good as that which we have been taught to look upon as our proudest possession.

One thing pointed out is that the porpoise "is a more highly developed animal from the evolutionary point of view than man, for after reaching the cat or dog stage of development the porpoise took up an aquatic habitation and underwent further evolutionary changes to suit his new environment."

It would seem, therefore, that the porpoise has become possessed of his big and complicated brain since the remote time when, like his huge cousin the whale, he abandoned the dry land for the sea.

There is an immensely interesting field for human curiosity guided by scientific instinct to explore in that mysterious submarine world which was chosen by a part of the land-world's mammals in preference to their ancestral home. The mammals were the last great division of land life to be developed, and while some of them followed the straight and narrow path of evolution that led up to man, the forebearers of the porpoise heard the song of the deep and went down, like the "Forest Primeval," to dwell forlorn in the palaces of the sea.

Hints on Care of the Hair

EACH season brings its own beauty problems. Autumn care of the hair varies slightly from the attention it requires at other seasons, for the reason that wintry winds, which sometimes roughen the lips and chap the face and hands, also have a tendency to dry out the natural oil of the hair.

If your hair feels harsh and brittle at this time of the year, I suggest that you give it a generous dose of the following emollient, the night before each shampoo, for the next month or two: Lanoline, 1 ounce; sulphur ¼ ounce.

I never advise rubbing vegetable oils, such as olive or almond into the scalp to remain over-night. My reason is, learned germ specialists say that vegetable oils attract germs, and so these oils should not be left on the scalp longer than 20 minutes or half an hour. I have never heard this objection advanced to animal or mineral oils, however, so you will be safe in giving your scalp a thorough massage with the mixture I have described and leaving it to sink in over-night, protecting your pillow with a towel.

Before you retire, brush your hair well, then part it over and over, and at each parting massage the lanolin-sulphur mixture into the roots, until your entire scalp is saturated.

It will not be easy to get all the oil out of your hair and scalp the next morning. You will need a very thorough shampoo, indeed. Much depends on this shampoo, for, if there is the least bit of lanolin or soapcurd left in your hair, it will seem sticky and dull and you will consider the formula unsuccessful, whereas, your own lack of thoroughness will be at fault.

Make a soap jelly of the very best quality of castile soap and use it freely and energetically as a shampoo. Two thorough latherings and at least three rinses for each soapsuds lathering are needed to give hair the soft shimmer that means absolute cleanliness.

I always advocate either two tablespoonfuls of vinegar or the juice of one fresh lemon in the last rinsing water, for the mild acid cuts coap-curd, oil and grease and insures a clean luster.

Now, that Winter is coming, many a woman is letting her hair grow—well, not long, but longer—so that it will take a permanent or else a finger wave gracefully. Or she may decide to draw it back from her face and ears and let it curl at the nape of her neck in loose ringlets in the way that is popular now.

The advice of an expert hairdresser, combined with your own sense of the fitness of things, should enable you to arrange your tresses in a manner fashionable, practicable and individual, and which will brighten your charm and beauty.

Do You Know—

While goldfish can be bought for as little as 10 cents each, the really fine specimens of rare breeds will cost up to $250 apiece.

Fully equipped with a self-contained watertower, pump and searchlight, the new fire engine being constructed for the Leicester fire brigade will be the largest and most powerful in England.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

GETTING married, like getting into the White House, requires skill, personality, tact, hard work—and blind luck. But the real TEST comes after the campaign—when you have to hold onto your "platform" with one hand and onto your common sense with the other.

When you marry, remember—

That marriage is a whole-time job—with a lot of "overtime" thrown in, and no Sundays or holidays off.

• • •

That the primary thing to consider is, not whether you can get along with the MAN.

• • •

That mere love has been strangled to death with solicitation and stifled to death with caresses than ever was starved to death; and the one great secret of making a man happy consists in knowing when to let him ALONE.

• • •

That a handsome man, a rich man, or a brilliant man may make a fascinating lover; but when it comes to picking a husband, a BUSY man is the safest bet.

• • •

That marriage is a partnership—and that doesn't mean that one-half of the firm should work like a dog in order tat the other half may live like a prize Angora.

• • •

That, sometimes, you are going to be worshipped like a Plaster saint, sometimes hated like an alarm clock, and sometimes dodged like an accusing conscience—but seldom treated as a normal, intelligent human being.

• • •

That every man is a study in black and white, with two natures forever battling within his poor, tormented soul; and to most men, "repentance" is merely the interval between the headache and the next temptation.

• • •

That a man marries a woman because he thinks he has found the One Plu-Perfect Being in all the world—and then spends the rest of his life in trying to "improve" her.

• • •

That every husband is a little "efficiency expert" in the home, who is never so happy as when he is giving a woman "advice," and telling her how to control the servants or how to manage the tradesmen.

• • •

That the qualities a man seeks in a bride no more resemble those he will want in a wife than a jazz-song resembles an old-fashioned lullaby.

• • •

That not every man who leaves word that he is "in conference" is out lunching with his stenographer. SOME of them are in conference!

• • •

That a woman may have nerves, temperament, curiosity, caprices or a martyr-complex, but the GROUCH is strictly a masculine prerogative.

• • •

That all this chatter about "personal liberty" in marriage is juts "smart talk." Because when you marry, you lay down your personal liberty and take off the armor of your individuality. And your only remedy is LOVE.

But, it's worth the PRICE!

BALDNESS is more prevalent among young and middle-aged business men than ever, says Masseur Kifford, who specializes in growing hair. "The belief that a bald head in an office is a sign of good business brains is an illusion. A bald head is merely the result of poor circulation in the scalp and nervous shock in the neck spine.—Worry of illness may have stopped the circulation as blood supply to the scalp comes through the neck arteries. Masseur Kifford contends that by means of finger vibration to the scalp and thyroid he can conquer bald heads which are not too far gone.

MONEY TO LOAN

AUTO LOANS

OUR CHARGES
Over 70% of all automobiles sold are bought on deferred payments; notes being handled by banks and finance companies, who make a certain finance charge for this service.
It is the DEALER and NOT the BANKER who arranges all the details. THE DEALER'S SOLE AIM being to SELL you HIS automobile. Would the same dealer or banker lend you the CASH? OF COURSE NOT!!!
NOW JUST THINK — you can walk into our office, get the CASH (not an auto) as a loan on ANY good, recent automobile at practically the SAME CHARGE for the SAME AMOUNT, repayable in the VERY SAME WAY.
Do we need to say more about the fairness and reasonableness of our charge and service?
Ours is a service that is INDISPENSABLE to auto owners and not available elsewhere.
Give us a call—See the facts—There is no obligation—We pleased thousands—We will please you!

REFRIGERATORS

THE E. B. WHITMAN COMPANY

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN BOSTON, OCTOBER 10, 1928

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Way of a Woman

She Hopped on a Moving Train and Earned Wrath of a Big Railroad

All the officers of the New Haven Railroad are wrathy because a New Rochelle girl hopped on a moving train, slipped from the step and was dragged as she clung to the handrails until it was feared she was killed. An official statement from the company expresses regret that the girl disappeared, uninjured, in the crowd before she could be turned over to the police.

The wrath of the railroad is based on the fact that the engineer stopped the train so suddenly that the couplings were broken between cars and traffic was delayed for several minutes. This was a pity, to be sure, but no reason to arrest the girl.

Without any more than the foregoing facts she should be easily identified if the railroad is insistent on prosecution. She is unmarried, younger than thirty years, wears short skirts, travels alone, is employed as a secretary or stenographer. Her hair is bobbed, probably a wind-blown bob and probably blonde. Her eyes are large, her cheeks and lips reddened, and her chin is tilted high. Her eyebrows are arched and plucked.

She weighs fewer than 120 pounds, drives a motor car, dances divinely, wears sheer silk stockings, a small black hat, fancy pumps with high heels and is very, very pretty. She hopped the moving train because she wanted to get aboard and had no intention of disorganising a great railroad system.

There should be no difficulty apprehending her. We could find a thousand of her. But what's the use? Would there be a chance in the world to convict her in any court?

What Was His Prayer?

It Was Patriotic, of Course

SECRETARY KELLOGG KNEELING IN PRAYER AT THE TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN FRENCH SOLDIER IN PARIS

Mr. Kellogg, Secretary of State, went abroad to persuade nations to outlaw war.

His pact was signed by France, England, Italy, Japan, and other important nations.

How much that pact means time will tell.

Just at present, with the pact nicely signed, we find the French and British uniting in what even British newspapers call "a naval combination against the United States."

It is easy to sign a PEACE pact, not quite so easy to INSURE peace.

This picture shows Secretary Kellogg, in Paris, kneeling on one knee, praying at the Tomb of the Unknown French Soldier.

The gentleman with the stovepipe hat, on the right, is Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador of the United States to France.

It would be interesting to know the words of Secretary Kellogg's prayer, as he knelt at the tomb of the dead French fighter.

Perhaps part of his prayer had to do with the League of Nations, and America's determination to keep out of it and out of ALL European entanglements. Let's HOPE so.

If that nameless dead French soldier could speak from his tomb, he would say to Mr. Kellogg, "The only thing that saved Frenchmen and France is the fact that WE WERE PREPARED.

"No peace pact would have helped us. NOTHING COULD have helped us except our fine artillery, our good guns, our great army, and THE FIGHTING COURAGE OF FRENCHMEN."

Secretary Kellogg, an intelligent man, must know that a peace pact, in case a war started, would count as little as that Belgium "scrap of paper" counted in the estimation of the German kaiser.

The things that count in this world are STRENGTH AND A RIGHTEOUS CAUSE.

A righteous cause without strength has the SYMPATHY of all good men, but it doesn't win.

IDEA OF CENSORSHIP COMES FROM PAST

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MR. JAMES N. ROSENBERG, in an address before the Bar Association of the City of New York, gives an interesting review of the censorship idea.

Most people think it is a new thing, an outbreak of the puritanical conscience.

On the contrary it is very old. Censorship has been defined by the courts as the power to lay a "previous restraint" on publication.

It is a power that up to recent times has been steadily repudiated by American practice. The censor theory implies that a man should be prevented from doing wrong; the modern theory is that he should be left free, but punished if his actions are wrong.

The censor idea is old. The censor in ancient Rome was a feared and mighty magistrate. He was a despotic superintendent of private as well as public conduct and morals.

Freedom from censorship is a modern conception. "Though many European revolutions have determined to break down the censor's shackles, it is a comic travesty that no sooner has a new government been set up than a censorship, severer far than its predecessor, has been established."

Censorship is still widely practiced in Europe. It was used by the Inquisition, the French Revolution, Napoleon and Metternich. The early Puritans of Massachusetts practiced it, but gave it up in 1725.

Plato said that in an ideal state the first thing will be to establish a censorship of the writers.

Sir Thomas Moore proposed a rigid censorship in his "Utopia."

A few of the victims of censorship are Copernicus, Galileo, Chaucer, Spenser, Hobbes, Macaulay, Mill, Gibbon, Heine, Hugo, Zola and Renan.

Milton's "Areopagitica," was published in the 17th century. It began the battle to end the British political censorship bills and the detested power of a Star Chamber of laying a "previous restraint."

Blackstone says: "The liberty of the press is indeed essential to the nature of a free state, and consists in laying no previous restraints upon publications, and not in freedom from censor for criminal matter when published."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

LEON'S wondering if it pays to be frank with a woman. Leon had one of those expansive moments the other night and he told Helene about that incident in St. Louis. The time he went on a convention with the other fellows. Not a nice little incident. Leon's never been particularly proud of it. But he just had a feeling he ought to tell someone, so he spilled it to Helene. And of course he thought she'd scold him a little and then sympathize with him and send him off feeling great.

But instead, Helene froze. And she's been edgy ever since.

"That's what you get for being frank and honest with a woman," sneers Leon. "I certainly thought Helene was a broadminded girl, but you never can tell. This lets me out —I'll never tell a woman the truth again."

So Leon passes the buck to Helene and goes away thinking he's the injured party. But is he? Is Helene "narrow minded" because she doesn't warm up to Leon's confidential reminiscences? Was she in honor bound to cheer and comfort him? And has she reflected discredit on her sex because she didn't? Or do we ask too much when we expect sympathy and understanding in return for our confidences?

After all, why should we expect people to understand us or warm up to our personal memoirs? The average human has all he can manage if he understands himself and digests his own problems. It's pure selfishness and conceit for us to expect him to understand and digest ours also.

There is, I admit, a large luxury in opening the well-known mouth and spilling the beans on one's self. It feels exactly like taking off one of those oldfashioned corsets and letting one's shape slip after a long, hard day. Than which there is—or was—no higher human ecstasy. Almost equal is the joy of shedding one's stiff moral front and letting one's true character out for an airing. But afterward—

Oh, afterward!

Why, that's another story.

So there's the low-down on this frankness business, my friend.

If confessing dangerous data on yourself is your idea of a merry indoor sport by all means follow your impulse. But don't blame the other fellow if he doesn't join the hallelujah chorus. That's not his business. Nobody's paying him a salary to understand YOU. And you've only yourself to blame if your frankness isn't followed with sweet hugs and kisses.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The opportunity is often lost by deliberating.—Syrus.

Know all and you will pardon all.—Thomas a' Kempis.

They who live in history only seemed to walk the earth again.—Longfellow.

Burke said that there were three estates in Parliament, but in the reporters' gallery yonder there sat a fourth estate more important far than they all.—Carlyle.

Merely to breathe freely does not mean to live.—Goethe.

Desire of greatness is a godlike sin.—Dryden.

The blunders of youth are preferable to the triumphs of manhood, or the success of old age.—Disraeli.

What is harder than rock, what softer than water? Yet hard rocks are hollowed out by soft water.—Ovid.

All our wants, beyond those which a moderate income will supply, are purely imaginary.—St. John.

A man who has no office to go to—I don't care who he is—is a trial of which you can have no conception.—Shaw.

Obedience is the key to every door.—MacDonald.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—A most perplexing thing about big executive jobs in New York is how easy they are to fill in emergency. It is trite that opportunity makes the man, but judging from a few incidents recently that hits the nail on its widely discussed head.

The $100,000 a year executive of an established concern a year ago decided he had enough of business and its anxieties and resigned over night. Grave conferences were held as to his successor. Tempting offers were made to several recognized executives.

In the end, and as a mere temporary expedient, the son-in-law of the founder was drafted into service. He was one of those tennis playing enthusiasts with buck-teeth and oiled hair usually found in flannneled ease on country club porches. He seemed disturbed by his new duties. And everybody tittered.

Yet in six months he almost completely revolutionized the business, and at the end of the year doubled its profits. As this is written two branch factories are being built, and the young man is no longer seen among gay haunts that used to know him so well.

The New York theater has an example of a sank-touring press agent who was given the opportunity to produce what was considered a mediocre play on Broadway and became one of the leading producers in a year. Two of the shrewdest movie financiers were second-rate newspaper reporters.

A chain store organizer who had been bounced from seven successive jobs became a $1500 a week executive in three months. He accepted the job for a month without salary to show what he could do. "I had no idea I could do it. It was a desperate chance," he said.

Perhaps the most notable example of all was that of a shipping clerk in a safety razor concern. He heard the general manager had resigned and wrote a letter which impressed the owner sufficiently to give him a trial. That was two years ago. Today he is a partner in the concern.

MANY chuckle at the "Up From Nowhere" heroes of real life featured in the go-to-it-and-win magazines, and yet they offer more actual romance than heroes in fiction. If fictionized, we would likely sniff it wasn't possible.

LIFE continues its prankish disillusionments. As one who believed the fan mail of a movie star was delivered daily in trucks, I have the word of a recognized star that his weekly average is never more than 100 letters. Many columnists receive more than that.

THEN there is that delusion of mash notes sent to beautiful stage ladies. They are so rare that when received the recipient goes gadding about gaily showing them to whoever will read. Anna Held in her day was said to receive more than any other actress and this was due largely to a provocative song sung with much rolling eyes at the audience. It rather invited flirtatious advances and many took her seriously.

WRITES a New Yorker: "Exactly 30 years ago I went with my wife to a restaurant on 14th st. serving a special dinner for 25 cents. Last night I paid $3 each for a dinner not so good, including the spinach."

MANY of us who remember the 65-cent dinners of 15 years ago with a bottle of free red or white wine—but why revive all that? There are some still living who can even remember when druggists were druggists.

INDEED, I can remember back before the pocket lighter when it was natty to strike a match on the heel without losing a step, but I don't want to play this any more. I'm going back too far.

White Sheep and Black

Why White Sheep Eat More

The Democratic Party publishes a little book to prove that "Republican prosperity is a myth." It says most of the business depression in United States history has occurred while the Republicans were in power.

That reminds you of the question, "Why do white sheep eat more than black sheep?" The answer is "Because there are MORE white sheep."

The Republicans have been in power nearly all the time.

What is the use of issuing a book calling prosperity a myth when the owners of 24,000,000 automobiles and the millions of men earning double what they earned a few years ago know the statement to be UNTRUE?

The difficult job of the Democratic Party this year is to fight successfully GENUINE PROSPERITY and the Coolidge plurality of 7,000,000.

Instead of preaching hard times, Democrats should promise to make this PROSPEROUS country MORE prosperous. That would be intelligent politics.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

"LITTLE white road that goes straying over far hill and plain, lingering, wandering, playing, here, by wide fields of grain, little road, blithely going, where do you lead by day? On, where a brook is flowing. On, beyond meadows gay. Then, when the day gives over, where do you lead by night? On, where the moonlit clover scatters its magic white; on, where to realms enchanted whispering forests change; pine trees by nature planted night can make vague and strange. Night with her starry legions fashions the world anew, flooding with charm the regions little roads wander through."
